We would like to thank a number of people for their support and help in making this book possible. First, we would like to give special recognition to all the young people who participated by providing their ideas for the book as well as their individual stories. In addition, we wish to acknowledge all the participants with schizophrenia who worked with us to “test” the book during the editing process. We thank John M. Kane, M.D., Chairman of the Department of Psychiatry for North Shore–Long Island Jewish Health System, for his support of our work within the hospital and research setting. To our colleagues at Zucker Hillside Hospital Research Center we owe our gratitude for their unending support and willingness to contribute significant sections whenever called upon. Joanne McCormack, M.S.W., continues to be an enormous help in keeping our project going at Zucker Hillside Hospital, sharing our book with people around the United States, and helping with diagnostic updates. Brian Sheitman, M.D., whose respect and caring for young people with schizophrenia was inspiring, also provided important seeds of encouragement early in planning. For the graphics of Low III, a self-stigmatizing female, and sketches of individual participants, we wish to acknowledge Audrey and Zelda, whose true names we are unable to provide. For the graphics of the brain and neurons, we wish to thank Handan Gunduz-Bruce, M.D.

The Nicholas Family Charitable Trust made it possible to fund this project, and Lynn Nicholas, Ph.D., in particular, offered faith in our endeavor throughout its four-year undertaking. We also wish to acknowledge... edge our previous editor, John Michel, for his confidence in our project and commitment to bringing the first edition of this book to fruition. His death on January 30, 2005, was a great loss for us, though we continue to be inspired by his good nature and fine mind. We wish to thank our current editor, Lauren Dockett, who carries on in the tradition of John Michel and provided guidance as we updated Diagnosis: Schizophrenia to reflect advances in understanding and treatment of schizophrenia. At the National Institute of Mental Health, Judith Rapoport, M.D., has been exceptionally supportive of the addition of childhood-onset schizophrenia to the new edition. Together with Dr. Rapoport, Julia Tossell, M.D., and Nitin Gogtay, M.D., provided the mentoring necessary for understanding childhood schizophrenia. At Yeshiva University’s Wurzweiler School of Social Work, thanks to our colleagues, who gave us encouragement and support, especially Dean Sheldon Gelman and Yeshiva University Provost Morton Lowengrub for their continued support. Also at Yeshiva, Zalmon Rothchild, M.A., provided invaluable research assistance for this second edition. Richard A. Schere, Ph.D., who was kind enough to read the first draft, provided comments that helped us to make the book more accessible to readers. For his legal assistance we wish to thank Victor Serby, J.D. Last but not least, we wish to thank Walter Miller for his patience and loving understanding of the importance of this project and grandsons Daniel and Mark Hooks for the nourishment of their hugs and kisses.

Rachel Miller receives no income from the publication of Diagnosis: Schizophrenia.

Susan Mason has designated 50 percent of proceeds from Diagnosis: Schizophrenia to schizophrenia research at Zucker Hillside Hospital.
