THE INNER LIFE OF THE DYING PERSON

END-OF-LIFE CARE: A SERIES
We all confront end-of-life issues. As people live longer and suffer from more chronic illnesses, all of us face difficult decisions about death, dying, and terminal care. This series aspires to articulate the issues surrounding end-of-life care in the twenty-first century. It will be a resource for practitioners and scholars who seek information about advance directives, hospice, palliative care, bereavement, and other death-related topics. The interdisciplinary approach makes the series invaluable for social workers, physicians, nurses, attorneys, and pastoral counselors.

The press seeks manuscripts that reflect the interdisciplinary, biopsychosocial essence of end-of-life care. We welcome manuscripts that address specific topics on ethical dilemmas in end-of-life care, death, and dying among marginalized groups, palliative care, spirituality, and end-of-life care in special medical areas, such as oncology, AIDS, diabetes, and transplantation. While writers should integrate theory and practice, the series is open to diverse methodologies and perspectives. Manuscript submissions should be sent to series editor Keith Anderson at anderson.1630@osu.edu.

Recent titles in the series:

Virginia E. Richardson and Amanda S. Barusch, Gerontological Practice for the Twenty-first Century: A Social Work Perspective

Ruth Ray, Endnotes: An Intimate Look at the End of Life

Terry Wolfer and Vicki Runnion, eds., Dying, Death, and Bereavement in Social Work Practice: Decision Cases for Advanced Practice

Mercedes Bern-Klug, ed., Transforming End-of-Life Care in the Nursing Home: The Social Work Role

Dona J. Reese, Hospice Social Work
THE INNER LIFE OF THE DYING PERSON

Allan Kellehear
. . . the light shines in the darkness,
and the darkness did not comprehend it.

—John 1:5