Contributors

Kathryn Betts Adams is assistant professor of social work at the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve University, in Cleveland, Ohio, where she teaches the course in social work practice with older adults. Her major research interests are the measurement of geriatric depression, the intersection of normal aging and depression in late life, and the emotional experiences and mental health of dementia patients and their family caregivers. She received her Ph.D. from the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Susan F. Allen, assistant professor of social work at the University of South Florida, St. Petersburg, has over twenty years of clinical experience working with children, families, and adults in both home-based and center-based settings. Her research interests are prevention programs for young children and their families, the effect of home and family environment on child outcomes, and child-care policy and practice. She received a Ph.D. in social welfare from the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve University.

Mary Armstrong is assistant professor and director of the Division of State and Local Support, Department of Child and Family Studies, at the Louis de la Parte Florida Mental Health Institute, University of South Florida. Her current research focuses on financing of effective children’s mental health systems, the effects of public-sector managed care on children with serious emotional problems, the effects of child welfare privatization and IV-E waivers, mental health literacy among caregivers and providers, and resilience of children in multiple countries. She has a Ph.D. in social work from Memorial University of Newfoundland, Canada.

José B. Ashford is a professor and associate director in the School of Social Work in the College of Public Programs at Arizona State University. He is also the director of the Office of Forensic Social Work and an affiliate professor in the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice and the School of Justice and Social Inquiry. Dr. Ashford has published widely in the areas of forensic and correctional mental health and is the associate editor of the forensic social work section of the second edition of the Social Workers’ Desk Reference. Dr. Ashford has a Ph.D. in sociology, specializing in criminology and deviant behavior, from Bowling Green State University, Ohio.

Maureen F. Balaam is a licensed marriage and family therapist with twenty-seven years experience in California’s mental health system working with children and adults with serious mental illness. She implemented Monterey County’s Mentally Ill Offender Crime Reduction grant in 2001 and designed the clinical program that complemented their mental health court. Currently she is in private practice in Monterey, California. She received her M.S. in counseling from San Francisco State University.

Roger Boothroyd is a professor and the associate chair in the Department of Mental Health Law and Policy at the Louis de la Parte Florida Mental Health Institute, University of South Florida. He is currently the principal investigator on a state-funded study to evaluate Florida’s Medicaid managed care mental health programs and the principal investigator on an NIH-funded study of research methods. Dr. Boothroyd has a Ph.D. in educational psychology from the State University of New York at Albany.

Katharine Briar-Lawson is dean and professor at the School of Social Welfare, State University of New York at Albany. She is a national expert on family-focused practice and child and family policy. Among her books are Family-Centered Policies and Practices: International Implications (coauthored), Innovative Practices with Vulnerable Children and Families (coedited), and two volumes on Evaluation Research in Child Welfare (coedited). She is the president of the National Association of Deans and Directors of Schools of Social Work. She received her Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley.

Katharine Cahn is the executive director of the Child Welfare Partnership at Portland State University’s Graduate School of Social Work. Her areas of in-
List of Contributors

Ellen L. Csikai is associate professor in the School of Social Work at the University of Alabama. Her areas of teaching and research are focused on social work practice in health care, end-of-life care and decision making, aging, and crisis intervention. Dr. Csikai is the editor of the Journal of Social Work in End-of-Life and Palliative Care. She has coauthored two textbooks: Ethics in End-of-Life Decisions for Social Work Practice and Teaching Resources for End-of-Life and Palliative Care Courses. Dr. Csikai received her Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh.

Mary E. Evans is a distinguished university health professor and the associate dean for research and doctoral study at the College of Nursing, University of South Florida. She is a child mental health services researcher with interests in interventions for children with emotional and behavioral problems and their families and in system-level issues such as collaboration and conflict in interorganizational efforts to serve this population. Dr. Evans has a Ph.D. in sociology from the State University of New York at Albany.

Cynthia Franklin is professor and holder of the Stiernberg/Spencer Family Professorship in Mental Health at the University of Texas at Austin, School of Social Work. She is an internationally known leader in school-based mental health practice, with over one hundred publications in the professional literature and several books, including The School Services Sourcebook: A Guide for School-Based Professionals, Family Treatment: Evidence-Based Practice with Populations at Risk, and Clinical Assessment for Social Workers, now in its second edition. She earned her Ph.D. at the University of Texas at Arlington.

Mindy Holliday is an assistant professor at Portland State University, School of Social Work. She has experience as a practitioner and program director for home-services programs: the VESTA program for adjudicated youth, Detroit, Michigan; Families First in Macomb County, Michigan; and the HOME-BUILDERS program in Clark County, Washington. Her research focuses on barriers to services for indigenous groups in Mexico, communities of color in the U.S. juvenile justice system, and lesbians and their families. She earned...
List of Contributors

an M.S.W. from the University of Michigan and an M.A. in cultural anthropology and sociology from Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan.

Anne Kuppinger is an independent consultant with over twenty years of experience facilitating the development of effective, integrated systems of care for children. She has worked with state and local governments, youth and family advocacy organizations, and private providers to conduct strategic planning, policy reform, implementation management, evaluation, and resource development. She was responsible for the administration of home-based crisis-intervention services, family-based treatment, and federally funded demonstration projects at the New York State Office of Mental Health. She received her M.Ed. from the University of Maryland at College Park.

Christine Lagana-Riordan is a Ph.D. student at the University of Texas at Austin’s School of Social Work, with experience as a school social worker serving students with special cognitive and mental health needs. Her research interests include school social work, developmental disabilities, and education policy. She is currently the co-principal investigator on a study examining school social workers’ perceptions about educational accountability in Texas. She earned an M.S.W. from the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Cathleen A. Lewandowski is an associate professor at the School of Social Welfare, State University of New York at Albany, and director of the Center of Human Services Research. Her recent research has focused on drug-treatment outcomes for women who are receiving child welfare, welfare, and drug-treatment services. She has also studied the needs of social workers who work in public agencies such as child welfare. She is a clinical social worker in the U.S. Army Reserves and consults with military leaders on how to best support military families. Her Ph.D. is from the University of Kansas.

Kristine Nelson is dean and professor at the School of Social Work at Portland State University in Oregon. She has been the principal investigator on six federally funded studies of family preservation services and child neglect and has participated in several national symposia and expert panels on research and research methodology in these areas. Dr. Nelson is coauthor of Reinventing Human Services: Community- and Family-Centered Practice, Evaluating Family-Based Services, and Alternative Models of Family Preservation: Family-Based Services in Context. Dr. Nelson earned her doctoral degree at the University of California, Berkeley.

Katherine Sternbach is a principal with Mercer Government Human Services Consulting at Mercer Health & Benefits LLC. She specializes in the design, implementation, and management of behavioral-health service systems. She has experience at the national, state, and local levels with behavioral-health programs, developmental-disabilities systems, and jails and criminal justice agencies. She also has expertise in government sector–managed behavioral health care. She received her M.Ed. from Northeastern University and an M.B.A. from Boston University.

Kim Strom-Gottfried is the Smith P. Theimann Jr. Distinguished Professor of Ethics and Professional Practice at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. Dr. Strom-Gottfried is an active scholar, trainer, and consultant in the field of ethics. She has written numerous articles, monographs, and chapters on the ethics of practice. She is the author of Straight Talk About Professional Ethics and The Ethics of Practice with Minors and the coauthor of Direct Social Work Practice and Teaching Social Work Values and Ethics: A Curriculum Resource. She received her Ph.D. from the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve University.

Patrick Sullivan serves as professor at the Indiana University School of Social Work. He helped develop the strengths model of social work practice and has extended the model to mental health and addictions treatment. He has over sixty professional publications on a diverse range of topics. He received the Distinguished Hoosier Award from Governor Frank O’Bannon in 1997 and earned the Sagamore of the Wabash, the highest civilian honor awarded in Indiana, from Governor Joseph Kernan in 2004. Dr. Sullivan has a Ph.D. from the University of Kansas.

Elizabeth M. Tracy is a professor at the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve University, and is chair of the Ph.D. program there. Her research on the development and evaluation of social work practice methods that support families and make use of natural helping networks has been applied by other researchers to family-preservation programs, residential settings for youth, early intervention, and community mental health case management. She has coauthored a number of books, including Person-Environment Practice: The Social Ecology of Interpersonal Helping and Social Work Practice with Children and Families. Dr. Tracy received her Ph.D. from the University of Washington.