INDEX

Adams, P., 187–188
Adler, G., 167; on recognition memory, 177 ambivalence: avoidance of, using splitting defense, 78; destruction of attachment and, 8 antilibidinal ego: characteristics of, 8, 86–91; desire for revenge and, 88–89; extreme example of, 81, 89; Fairbairn’s patient with, 86; integrating dissociated memories and, 105–110; as “internal saboteur,” 52; in obsessional patient, 192; patient’s dream of being poisoned and, 45; resistance of, to treatment, 12; revenge against rejecting object and, 145; sabotage of treatment for, 111; strategies against rejecting object and, 56, 60; struggle with rejecting object and, 87; as therapeutic ally, 90; transferences to external objects and, 64, 101–102
Armstrong-Perlman, E., 96, 170
Autonomous Self, The (Sutherland), 212 “badness”: internalized objects and, 32; obsessional child and, 188; of self, 11, 38, 156 bad object: acting out against safe, 156; assessment of attachment to, 44, 154–155; borderline patient’s return to, 171–172; continuing need for, 139–140; fear of release of, 6, 48; power of, over child, 44
Bad Object, The (Seinfeld), 213
Barnett, J., 188
Battered Woman, The (Walker), 180
battered women, 180–184
Beattie, H.: on Fairbairn’s childhood, 17; on Fairbairn’s creative period, 25; on Fairbairn’s relationship to his father, 70; on influence of “shell-shocked” officers on Fairbairn, 18; on “The Repression and the Return of Bad Objects,” 34–35; on revenge against rejecting objects, 88, 111
Bollas, C., 97
borderline personality disorder, 153–180
British Journal of Medical Psychology, 208
British Psycho-Analytical Society, 74, 82–83
Celani, D., 26, 57, 61, 65, 68–69, 86, 117, 181, 203 central ego: definition of, 52; example of improvement of, 149–150; Fairbairn’s lack of interest in, 53; impoverishment of, 57; impoverishment of, in obsessional patient, 188–189, 191; maturity of, 146; “mystification” of, 187; relationship of, to ideal object, 54, 186; relationship of, to subego, 9, 55–56; strengthening of, 11, 46, 65, 141, 144–145; supporting gains of, 147–148 child: assumption of, that love is worthless, 4; attachment of, to frustrating objects, 28; fear of, of expressing hate toward object, 67; fear of, of expressing need toward object, 69–70; focus of, on child (continued)
  partial objects, 6, 27; hate of objects by, 29–30; need of, for bad objects, 44; need of, for love, 32, 56; sexuality as substitute satisfaction for, 33; unconditional dependence of, on objects, 34

Containing Rage, Terror, and Despair (Seinfeld), 213

Davies, J.: on averagable and irreconcilable representations, 120–121; on constructivism, 119; on dissociative models, 23; on “inviting” technique, 170
Davies, J., and M. Frawley, on projective/introjective processes of psychotherapy, 122–123 dreams: dissociated perceptions in, 47; as reflecting parts of self, 59

Druck, A., 141, 153

Easser, B., and S. Lesser, 205
Empty Core, The (Seinfeld), 213
“Endopsychic Structure Considered in Terms of Object Relationships” (Fairbairn), 6, 51–71 exciting object, 96–97; transference of, toward therapist, 104–105

Fairbairn, Then and Now (Skolnick and Scharff), 212
Fairbairn, W. R. D.: childhood of, 17; early papers of, 24; education of, 17–18; errors of, on internalization, 29; influence of children’s clinic on, 19, 35; influence of Klein on, 25, 35; influence of “shell-shocked” officers on, 18; lack of influence of, in psychoanalysis, 19–20, 72, 208; Martin Luther protest and, 211; neurotic symptom of, 16; at Royal Edinburgh Hospital, 18. See also individual papers
Fairbairn and the Origins of Object Relations (Grotstein and Rinsley), 212
Fairbairn’s Journey into the Interior (Sutherland), 212 framework: challenges to, 134; patient violations of, 206; vacation disruptions to, 136

Freud, S.: on death instinct, 22; on inherited drives, 24
From Instinct to Self (Fairbairn), 212

Giovacchini, P., 128–129
good object: encountering, in the real world, 134; in Fairbairn’s model, 45; influence of, 150–151; reliance on, during stress, 130

Greenberg, J., and S. Mitchell: on attachment to neglectful parents, 22; on Fairbairn’s inconsistency, 20; on Fairbairn’s lack of good objects, 140; on Fairbairn’s relational model, 15–16; influence of, 21; on repetition compulsion, 23; on self-defeating characteristics of psychopathology, 21–22

Guinea, T., 10; 139; integration of dissociated structured and, 146

Grotstein, J., and D. Rinsley: on attachment to bad objects, 19; on “demonic” view of child, 67; on Fairbairn’s character, 16–17; on impact of Fairbairn’s work, 207 guilt: abandonment of abusive object and, 156–157; separation and, 172

Guntrip, H.: on function of analytic innovators, 24; visit of, to orphanage, 19

Hamilton, N., 69, 142
Harrison, K., 33
Havens, L., 154
histrionic personality disorder, 199–206; continuum of, 204; family patterns of, 13, 201–203; sexual exploitation of, 200–201

Hollander, M., 200
Hughes, J., on Guntrip’s analysis with Fairbairn, 19

Illusion of Love, The (Celani), 12, 49, 181–184 inner world: as closed system, 75, 78, 79; structuralization of, 141–142; therapist’s attempt to breach, 81–82; therapist’s lack of impact on, 167 internalization: of bad objects, 37; of fragments of good objects, 40; of objects, over time, 85; of therapist into patient’s ego structure, 73, 136–142
International Journal of Psychoanalysis, 51, 72, 208, 211
Interpreting and Holding (Seinfeld), 213 isomorphic transformation, 121–122; examples of, 126–127
Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, 20
Kahn, M., 72
Kainer, R., 192, 196–197
Kernberg, O.: advocacy of Fairbairn’s model by, 20; return of, to analytic neutrality, 21
Klein, M., 28, 35, 39, 41, 83
Kopp, S., 38, 188
Langs, R., on therapeutic framework, 131
Legacy of Fairbairn and Sutherland, The (Scharff and Scharff), 213
Levenson, E.: on isomorphic transformation, 121–122
libidinal ego, 8; avoidance of confrontation of, 160; characteristics of, 9, 93–96; conscious expression of, 61, 95–96; distortions of reality and, 94; need for repression of, 56; parent’s deliberate use of, 164–165; relationship and loyalty to exciting object and, 52, 62–63; stimulation of, by therapist’s attention, 90, 128; techniques to counter, 101; transference of, to exciting object, 99–101; transitional objects and, 177–178
Liotti, G., 156
Loewald, H., 144
Luisada, P., P. Peele, and E. Pittard, 205
Mahler, M., 31, 69
Mallinger, A., 189–191, 194
Marmour, J., 205
master narrative, 118, 120; interpretation with, 126, 132, 139
Mitchell, S.: on attachment to neglectful parents, 22; on development of individual meanings, 209; on evil in Klein’s model, 28; on grief in psychotherapy, 139; on interactive nature of analytic process, 75, 82; on internalization in Fairbairn’s model, 4; on multiple selves in Fairbairn’s model, 52; on patient’s dream, 109; on resistance to interpretations, 137; on revolutionary nature of Fairbairn’s model, 74, 74; on social nature of humans, 15–16
“Moral Defense Against Bad Objects, The” (Fairbairn), 6; on forceful internalization of good objects, 39; on influence of good objects, 42; on internalization of object’s “badness,” 38 narrative: development of, 150–156; hysteric and, 206; integration and, 145–146; patient’s “badness” and, 155; truth of, 9 negative therapeutic reaction, 110–115
Object Relations Individual Therapy (Scharff and Scharff), 213
Object Relations in Psychoanalytic Theory (Mitchell and Greenberg), 2, 212
Object Relations Theory and Practice (Scharff), 213 “Observations on the Nature of Hysterical States” (Fairbairn), 40, 52
obsessional personality disorder: early attachments to objects and, 196; family characteristics of, 12, 186–196; internal dynamics of, 13, 191–193; marital relationship and, 190
Odgen, T., 65; on antilibidinal ego, 87; on assumptions of drive theory, 209; on crusade against rejecting object, 88; on interpretation of patient projections, 124; on patient’s sudden splitting, 129; on value of disparate models, 211
Oedipal conflict, Fairbairn’s revision of, 70–71, 76–77
“On the Nature and Aims of Psychoanalytical Treatment” (Fairbairn), 1, 7–8, 71–83
Pine, F., 186, 199
Porter, K., 90–91
Primer of Object Relations Therapy (Scharff and Scharff), 213 projection: of ego structures, 121–130; of love into patient, 142–143; of rejecting object into therapist, 126–127, 130; therapist’s tolerance of, 123–124 psychoanalysis: abandonment of patient and, 76; aim of, 79; as struggle between therapist and patient, 82

Psychoanalytic Studies of the Personality (Fairbairn), 2, 52, 212

psychopathology, 6, 43

psychotherapy: challenging antilibidinal stance, 158–160; confronting family view of child, 155; definition of split-off structures and, 77–78; techniques of, for borderline patient, 153–156; termination and, 148–149, 151

Rayner, E., psychoanalytic feud and, 3, 19

real relationship, 10; purpose of, 74; re-parenting and, 144; tactics against bad object and, 161–162

rejecting object, 8; abuse in obsessional family and, 192–194; active sabotage of patient’s development and, 162–164; definition of, 52, 91–93; enactment of, with others, 62, 103–104; Fairbairn’s discovery of, 58; identification with, example of, 80; illusions about, 163; therapeutic techniques against, 93; transference of, 114

Relational Concepts in Psychoanalysis (Mitchell), 212

Relationality (Mitchell), 212

“Repression and the Return of Bad Objects (With Special Reference to the ‘War Neuroses’), The” (Fairbairn), 5, 35–50

on derepression of bad objects, 50 resistance: antilibidinal transference and, 78; from libidinal-ego fantasies, 62; from self structures, 63; lack of differentiation and, 173; loss of needed object and, 49; in obsessional patient, 198–199; patient’s theories and, 137, 154; unmet dependency needs and, 168

“Revised Psychopathology of the Psychoses and Psychoneuroses, A” (Fairbairn), 5, 30–34

Rubens, R.: on attachment to negative aspects of experience, 61; on central-ego weakness, 55; on development of structures, 23; on nonstructuring internalization, 40

Schafer, R., 118, 119

Scharff, D., 85

Scharff, D., and E. Birtles: on “experience-near” aspect of Fairbairn’s model, 43; on intensity of part-self–part-object relationship, 64

Scharff, J., and D. Scharff, 212, 213; on internalization of objects, 41–42

Schimel, J., 192, 194

“Schizoid Factors in the Personality” (Fairbairn), 26–30

schizoid pathology, 167–169; as resistance to therapy, 11

Scottish Institute of Human Relations, 21

Searls, H., 141–142

Seinfeld, J., on structural deficit, 110, 167

shame: attachment to bad objects and, 37; dependency on therapist and, 136; disparagement of child’s love and, 175; lack of differentiation and, 174; neglected children and, 6; patient’s incestuous wish and, 32–33

Shapiro, D., 190–191, 195

Skolnick, N., and Scharff, D., 212

Slipp, S., 200–201

splitting defense: battering scenario and, 180–183; child’s use of, 62, 66–67; extreme example of, 179–180; lack of awareness of structures about each other, 60; obsessional patient’s use of, 189; as refuge from hostility toward objects, 69

structural model: errors in, 60; origins of, from patient’s dream, 58–59; use of, in interpretation, 137–138

Sullivan, H., 5; on parent’s aggression toward child, 187, 192; relational model and, 16; on tenderness toward child, 196

Sutherland, J.: on collapse of central ego, 58; on Fairbairn’s early papers, 25; on Fairbairn’s intellect, 17–18; on Fairbairn’s mother, 17; on Fairbairn’s motives, 16; on reaction of analysts to Fairbairn’s paper, 83
“Synopsis of an Object-Relations Theory of the Personality” (Fairbairn), 54
Szasz, T., 71

transference: confusion of therapist and, 122; fury of rejecting object and, 92; futility of interpretations, 79; patterns of, 9, 98, 121–130

Treatment of the Borderline Patient, The (Celani), 1, 47

unconscious: competing models of, 77; reciprocal relationship of, to consciousness, 54–55; source of, 35; unacceptable memories in, 36

Walker, L., 12; on “Cycle Theory of Violence,” 12, 181–183
Winckler, M., on “mystification” of child, 12, 187
Winnicott, D., 139, 143
Winnicott, D., and M. Kahn, 72
Youngerman, J., 117
Zitzel, E., 205