CONTRIBUTORS

DR. LUIS BARRIOS is an Associate Professor at the Puerto Rican/Latin American Studies Department, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, New York City. He is the Principal Investigator and Director of Palenque-Family Life Center, a youth violence reduction program in the Washington Heights community, New York City. Dr. Barrios is a member of the American Psychological Association, and a Board Certified Forensic Examiner (American College of Forensic Examiners). Dr. Barrios is also an Episcopal priest in the diocese of New York.

DAVE BROTHERTON is an Associate Professor of Sociology and Criminal Justice at John Jay College of Criminal Justice and the Graduate Center, City University of New York. Dr. Brotherton cofounded the Street Organization Project in 1997 with Luis Barrios and directed two major conferences in 1998 and 2001 on the organization of street youth both nationally and internationally. Dr. Brotherton is currently working on the issue of school-age youth expelled from the United States and organizing a third international conference on resistance and youth street performance in Brazil to be held in 2004. Dr. Brotherton has two books forthcoming with Columbia University Press: the first written with Luis Barrios on the Latin Kings and Queens of New York City and the second coedited with Michael Flynn on cross-cultural perspectives on youth resistance.

RUSSELL CHABOT has a Ph.D. in Sociology from State University of New York at Buffalo. He is currently a “roads scholar” teaching at the University of Rhode Island, Providence College and Rhode Island School of Design. His areas of interest include the sociology of culture, deviance, and visual sociology. At present, he is working on a study of the response to video surveillance in everyday life, and a visual ethnography of a small island community in Rhode Island (focusing on the interaction between long-term residents and recent arrivals).

DR. RICHARD (RIC) CURTIS is an Associate Professor and Chair of the Anthropology Department at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice. He has more than twenty years of experience conducting ethnographic research in New York City neighborhoods. At John Jay College, he was the Project Director of the NIDA-funded “Heroin in the Twenty-first Century” project, a five-year ethnographic study of heroin users and distributors in New York City. He was also the Principal Investigator of the NIJ-funded “Lower East Side Trafficking” project, a two-year study examining the developmental trajectories and interactions between markets for different illegal drugs.
DONNA DECESARE is an award-winning freelance photographer and writer. Her photographs have appeared in many news and arts publications including the New York Times Magazine, Life, DoubleTake, and Aperture. Her awards include the Dorothea Lange Prize, an Alicia Patterson Fellowship, a Mother Jones International Photo Fund Award, an Independent Project Fellowship from the Soros Foundation, and in 2002, a top prize for her work on violence in Colombia from the National Press Photographers Pictures of the Year competition. DeCesare is currently Assistant Professor of Journalism at the University of Texas at Austin.

ALBERT DICHIARA earned his Ph.D. at the University of Missouri. He is Associate Professor of Sociology and Director of the Criminal Justice Program at the University of Hartford. He has published in the areas of drug use, drug education and drug policy, gangs, and crime policy. He has served as a consultant to the State of Connecticut and to private agencies on a variety of crime and justice issues. His current projects include research on the crime-police relationship in Hartford’s North End, racism in the Connecticut criminal justice system, and he is project director of a school-based crime prevention program in several Hartford middle schools.

PHILLIP KASSEL is a staff attorney at Massachusetts Correctional Legal Services, with twenty-two years experience as a civil rights and poverty law advocate in Massachusetts, Washington State, and Minnesota. He has represented classes of poor persons and prisoners in numerous significant cases, has given voice to his clients’ concerns in various governmental and public forums, and has written other articles for legal journals about his clients’ problems, including the undue expulsion of children from school and police resistance to protecting women from domestic violence.

LOUIS KONTOS is Associate Professor of Sociology at Long Island University, C. W. Post Campus. He has published in the areas of ethnography and critical theory, and is completing a book on The Politics of Deviance and Social Control (Roman and Littlefield).

JUAN FRANCISCO ESTEVA MARTÍNEZ is a Mexico City–born Zapoteca from the indigenous community of Tehuantepec, Oaxaca. He immigrated to the San Francisco Bay Area in 1987 where he completed high school and obtained a dual degree in Chicano Studies and Sociology from the University of California at Berkeley. He is currently a doctoral candidate in Sociology at the State University of New York at Albany, a guest lecturer at the University of California at Berkeley’s Sociology Department, and works as research assistant for the Alameda Alliance for Health, Cultural Competency Initiative.

KEVIN MCDONALD earned his Ph.D. in Sociology from the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales (Paris). He is Senior Lecturer in Sociology at the University of Melbourne. He is a specialist in ethnographic work focusing on action and identity, and is currently engaged in two areas of research. The first explores the social worlds and embodied subjectivities of young people who inject drugs; the second explores patterns of action and identity emerging in direct action groups involved in globalization conflicts. He can be contacted at <k.mcdonald@unimelb.edu.au>.

DANA NURGE recently joined the department of Public Administration and Urban Studies at San Diego State University as an assistant professor in criminal justice. She previously taught at Northeastern University College of Criminal Justice in Boston, where she completed a three-year study of female gangs and cliques and recently finished a project assessing local programs/services for “at-risk” adolescent girls. Dr. Nurge is currently completing a manuscript based on her female gang research and is teaching courses in the areas of juvenile justice and policy analysis.

RICHARD T. RODRÍGUEZ is Assistant Professor in the Department of Chicano Studies at California State University, Los Angeles. A graduate of the History of Consciousness program at UC Santa Cruz, he teaches, lectures, and writes on media and cultural studies.

CAMILA SALAZAR-ATIAS was a field researcher with the Street Organization Project between 1996 and 1999. She is currently studying for a graduate degree in Sociology at the University of Lund, Sweden.

LOREN SIEGEL is the former Director of Public Education for the American Civil Liberties Union.

DR. AVELARDO VALDEZ is a professor at the Graduate School of Social Work at the University of Houston. He obtained his Ph.D. in Sociology at the University of California, Los Angeles. Dr. Valdez was also a Fulbright Scholar at the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de Mexico, Mexico, D.F. His research and publications are on drugs, violence, adolescent gangs, drug markets, and sex workers in South Texas and the U.S./Mexico border. He is a recipient of National Institutes of Health (NIH), National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), Center for Disease Control (CDC), and Substance Abuse Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA/CSAT) grants. He is currently Director of the Office for Drug and Social Policy at the UH.

SUDHIR VENKATESH is Associate Professor of Sociology and African-American Studies, Columbia University. He is the author of American Project: The Rise and Fall of a Modern Ghetto (Harvard University Press, 2000).