A number of people have been instrumental in the writing of this book. A post-tenure review award from Portland State University allowed me to have a graduate research assistant, Gúy Holady, who was of enormous help in locating and reviewing existing literature on substance use disorders in LGBT populations. Relevant clinical case examples were provided by Michele Pearce and Tia Plympton. I am particularly indebted to Tia, who also contributed a valuable critique of the first draft of the book, and to Outside In, the Portland social service agency where she is an HIV-prevention specialist. Outside In provides healthcare, syringe exchange, housing, and mental health and substance abuse services for homeless and low-income youth and young adults. These services are critical to helping Oregon youth, many of whom are LGBT, successfully transition off the streets.

In addition, I am grateful to the other readers of the first draft of this book. Maria Talbott provided excellent suggestions, as did Ann Fields, whose expertise in motivational interviewing was particularly helpful. I thank them both for their thoughtful critical feedback as well as their friendship. My thanks also to Rick Reamer, editor of the Foundations of Social Work Knowledge Series, and Lauren Dockett, editor at Columbia University Press, who have provided support and helpful ideas since the initiation of this project.
It is impossible to adequately thank my partner, Nancy E. Wilder, who mastered relevant databases, searched diligently for obscure articles, and read and word-processed numerous drafts. Her attention to detail and wise counsel throughout the entire process were invaluable to me. Throughout late nights, weekends, and holidays spent writing, her patience and encouragement were unwavering.

My final thanks go to the most important contributors of all—the clients who have trusted me with their stories for the past forty-four years.
