AAI (Adult Attachment Interview), 426
Abbott, Edith, 111, 137
abstract code, content and theme analysis process, 504–508 accountability, qualitative program evaluation, 328 action learning: defined, 221; incorporated within U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 228 action research: action learning as bridge to education, 221; African Growth Opportunity Act, 227; approach to qualitative program evaluation, 313–314; background and definition, 214–216; collaborative partnerships for research and advocacy in Nigeria, 226–227; Crime Reduction in Schools Project, 217; data collection, 216; education as primary stage of, 217–220; funding of, 232–233; Ghana Association of Social Workers, 226; implications of action research for change agents in a global society, 233–234; Information and Technology Department, Cape Peninsula University of Technology, 225; International Council for Adult Education, 214; International Participatory Research Network, 214; as intervention for change and development, 216–217; limited government and university recognition of, 231–233; Loka Institute, 219; Look, Think, Act process, 217–220, 226; nonlinear nature, 218; outcomes, 215; overview, 213–214; participatory action research 314–316; participatory nature of, 215–216; principles related to, 215; in action research (continued) program evaluation 313–314: Project South, 218–219; “Public Health and Child Welfare: Implications for a Society’s Security” conference, 227; “Research for Action: University and Community Partnerships” teleconference, 219–220; School of Public Health, University at Albany, 225; School of Social Welfare, University at Albany, 223–226; School of Social Work (Ghana), 226; Snyder Evaluation Model, 313–314; strategic management, 363; 21st Century Nanotechnology Research and Development Act (2003), 219; U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 222–231; “Use of Technology as a Means of Empowerment” teleconference workshop, 226; Women on Farms Project (South Africa), 226. See also organizational decision-making, application of qualitative research to active learners, 82 Addams, Jane, 111, 137
adjourning stage, group development, 277 administration of narrative story-stem technique, 419–420
Adult Attachment Interview (AAI), 426
African Growth Opportunity Act (AGOA), 227 agenda, focus group: ending questions, 273–274; introductory questions, 272–273; key questions, 273; opening question, 272; overview, 271–272; question sequencing, 272; transition questions, 273 Aging Out documentary, 501
AGOA (African Growth Opportunity Act), 227 AI (analytic induction), 111–113 alcohol abuse, parenting and, 394 Alexander, Bryant, 73–74
alterity, 69
American Evaluation Association, 349 American social work literature, 93 analyst constructed typology, 539 analytic generalizability, 125 analytic induction (AI), 111–113
analytic memos, 322
analyzing outcomes, qualitative program evaluation, 339–341 annotations, creating with computer software, 293 archival research methods, situation analysis, 201
Argyle, Michael, 197
ASCT (Attachment Story Completion Task), 418, 437 assessing young children’s perceptions of family relationships, 413–444; Attachment Story Completion Task, 418; conceptual framework, 414–416; implications for social work practice and research, 436; MacArthur Story-Stem Battery, 418–419; maturing capacities of children, 415; overview, 413–414; qualitative analyses, 433–436; symbolic representations, of attachment figures, 415. See also narrative story-stem technique (NSST) assimilation, 138
Atkinson, P., 342
ATLAS.ti program, 294, 296–297, 300–301, 456–458
Attachment Story Completion Task (ASCT), 418, 437 attachment theory: insecure attachments, 415; internal working models, 415–416; secure attachments, 415 audio files, 291
authenticity: catalytic, 97; educational, 97; ontological, 97; tactical, 97 autoethnography, 24, 142, 145
avoidant stories, NSST, 422 axial coding, grounded theory: core concepts, 119; data analysis, 312; physician/social worker collaboration study, 527 bachelor of social work (BSW), 525 backing up work, data analysis software, 294

Barker, Roger, 198–199
Becker, Howard, 137
Behar, Ruth, 136
behavioral settings, situations, 198–199 believability (credibility): of analysis, computer software’s inability to improve, 287; in constructivist research, 94–98; physician/social worker collaboration study, 537–539; qualitative data analysis, 20

Belmont Report, 37
Bertaux, Daniel, 181–182 bias, researcher: computer software’s inability to reduce, 287; identifying potential, 23–25; mitigating, physician/social worker collaboration study, 537–538; monitoring, 252, 254 bioethics (healthcare ethics), 38
bipolar disorders, 409–410

Boas, Franz, 137
Bogdan, R., 345–346
Boolean queries, 295
Booth, Charles, 110
Bott, Elizabeth, 114
boundary issues: ethics and, 49–50; in parent/child relationship when parent has psychiatric disability, 403, 406, 409
Breckinridge, Sophonisba, 111, 137
Bureau of Applied Social Research, Columbia University, 264
Burgess, Ernest W., 137

CalWORKs (California’s welfare-to-work program), 447
Capra, F., 493
CAQDAS (Computer-Aided Qualitative Data Analysis) project, 299, 301
Caracelli, V., 348–349
Cardozo, Benjamin, 41
CARE (Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS Resources Emergency) Act of 2000, 204–205 caregiving: attachment organization and, 425–427; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 459–461 cases: action research, 218–220; deductive qualitative analysis, 110; defined, 342 caseworker/parent relationship case study: analytic procedure, 474–476; cases, 472–473; caseworker interview #1, 478–481; caseworker interview #2, 484–486; caseworker interview #3, 489–491; data analysis, 491–494; discussion and implications, 495–497; limitations caseworker/parent (continued) of, 494–495; literature review, 468–470; methods, 473–474; observation, 486; overview, 468; parent interview #1, 476–478; parent interview #2, 481–484; parent interview #3, 486–489; recruitment of participant, 472; role of definitions, 470–471; selection criteria for, 471–472; semistructured interviews, phenomenological approach, 473–474; shift in roles and relationship, 492 categorical classification systems, NSST coding, 422–423 causal networks, qualitative program evaluation, 339–340 CBCL (Child Behavior Checklist), 430–431 change, action research as intervention for, 216–217 change agents, implications of action research for, 233–234 change-process research, 337
Chicago School of Sociology, 107, 108, 111, 137
Child Behavior Checklist (CBCL), 430–431 child custody issues: pride of parent with psychiatric disability, 408; psychiatric disability and, 399–400, 402–403 child neglect: empowerment model, 496; indicated case, 471; interventions, 496; mortal neglect, 454; National Incidence Study of Child Abuse and Neglect, 468–469; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 446–465; strength-based perspective, 496; substantiated case, 471. See also caseworker/parent relationship case study children: child custody issues, 399–400, 402–403, 408; child neglect, 446–465, 468–469, 471, 496; child signals, 460; interviewing, 258; maltreatment of, 428–429. See also family relationships, assessing young children’s perceptions of; foster youth study chronic neglect, 493
Clarke, R., 345
Clifford, J., 138
closed-ended questions, 149, 258
closeness of contact, researchers and informants, 121–122 Code of Ethics, NASW, 38–39, 42; conflicts of interest and boundary issues, 50; “do no harm” concept, 48; privacy and confidentiality, 47; reporting results, 51. See also ethics in qualitative research coding data: axial coding, grounded theory, 119, 312, 527; data analysis and, 396–397; with data analysis software, 290–291, 293–294; “drag and drop,” 294; foster youth study, 503–512; grounded theory, 118–119; narrative content coding, NSST, 424; Narrative Emotion Coding, 424; narrative story-stem technique, 420–425; open coding, grounded theory, 118–119, 312; qualitative program evaluation, 322–323; selective, 119 coercion, use of by researcher, 45–46 cognitive development, play and, 414–416 cognitive mapping, 370–371
collaborative partnerships for research and advocacy, 226–228, 234n5 communication: ethnography of, 142; men versus women, 249; physician/social worker collaboration, 520 communicative validity, 95 community-based organizations: Loka Institute, 219; Project South, 218–219 community: collaboration interventions, 308–309; community planning, 309 community programs, evaluating, 309–310 Community Research Group (CRG), 192–193 competitors and collaborators, environmental scan, 374–375 completeness (saturation), qualitative data analysis, 22–23 Computer-Aided Qualitative Data Analysis (CAQDAS) project, 299, 301 concepts: core concepts, 119; defined, 108–109; sensitizing, 111, 455–456 conceptual models, DQA, 113–114 conducting interviews, 255–257
confessional tales: constructivist research reports, 98–99; ethnographic research, 159 confidentiality, 46–47 confident stories, NSST, 423
confirmability, qualitative data analysis, 22 conflict, family, 429–430 conflicts of interest, 49–50 constant comparative method, grounded theory, 396–397, 527 constructivist research: credibility and validity in, 94–98; data analysis, 91–93; data collection, 89–90; defining, 82–83; defining research question, 87–88; issues for, 100–101; overview, 81–82; problematizing research methods, 88–89; quality and rigor in, 94; sampling, 90–91; social groups, 83–84; values and, 85–87; writing up, 98–100 consumers groups, involving in evaluation methods, 309 content and theme analysis process, foster youth study, 504, 511–512 context: embedding, 198–199; locating meanings in, 21–22; role in understanding high-risk situations, 193–194 contextualized findings, 123 contrast questions, ethnographic interview, 150 conventional (structured) interviews, 244, 254, 316–317 Corbin, Juliet, 116
core values, NASW Code of Ethics, 38–39 Council on Social Work Education (CSWE), 3 credibility (believability): of analysis, computer software’s inability to improve, 287; in constructivist research, 94–98; physician/social worker collaboration study, 537–539; qualitative data analysis, 20 credit, acknowledging, 53
CRG (Community Research Group), 192–193
Crime Reduction in Schools Project (CRISP), 217 criteria, for action research, 215 critical ethnographers, 139–140 critical race theory: overview, 70–72; theory integration, 72–76 critical theory: overview, 69–70; theory integration, 72–76 cross-cultural interviewing, 247–248 CSWE (Council on Social Work Education), 3
cuing system, situations, 199 culture: cross-cultural interviewing, 247–248; cultural competence in qualitative research, 350–351; role in ethnography studies, 138–139; role in understanding situation, 201 custody (child) issues: pride of parent with psychiatric disability, 408; psychiatric disability and, 399–400, 402–403 data analysis: caseworker/parent relationship case study, 491–494; constant comparative method, 396–397; constructivist research, 91–93; ethnography, 157–158; foster youth study, 503–512; identifying and portraying relationships within data, 295–296; interpretive criteria for, 20–26; methods, overview, 20; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 453–456 data analysis software: ATLAS.ti program, 294, 296–297, 300; audio files, 291; Boolean queries, 295; choosing, 298–301; coding images with, 290–291; coding process, 293–294; Computer Assisted Qualitative Data Analysis project, 299; creating subsets of materials to focus analysis, 295; “drag and drop” coding, 294; getting started, 292–293; HyperRESEARCH, 300; identifying and visually portraying relationships within data, 295–296; learning to use, 297–298; manuals, 300; MAXQDA, 300; memos and annotations, 293; multimedia analytic tools, 297; multimedia data, 289–291; multisite team qualitative research, 288–289; NVivo, 300; online resources, 301; organizing and analyzing text-based research, 286–287; output options and backing up work, 294; overview, 284–285; queries within coded materials, 295; raw data files, 292; search functions, 294; segmenting images with, 290–291; software-based qualitative analysis project, 292; video files, 291; Weitzman and Miles sourcebook, 299; what computer software does not do, 287–288; word counts and statistical functions, 296 data collection: action research, 216; constant comparative method, 396–397; constructivist research, 89–90; foster youth study, 502–512; grounded theory, 117–118; methods, overview, 18–20; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 449–453; qualitative program evaluation, 316–322; situation analysis, 200–207 deception, use of by researcher, 45–46 decision-making: leadership, 361; patient care, 522. See also organizational decision-making, application of qualitative research to deductive qualitative analysis (DQA): applications to practice research, 128–129; discussion, 129–131; induction and deduction, 110–113; links to direct practice, 120–128; overview, 107–110; types of initial conceptual models, 113–114 “defining the situation” process, 196–198
Delamont, S., 342
Denzin, N.K., 100
department of social services (DSS), 472 descriptive (grand tour) questions, qualitative interviewing, 150, 257 development: action research as intervention for, 216–217; group, 274–276; play and cognitive development, 414–416
diachronic reporting, 525–526
diagnosis and treatment, of psychiatric disabilities in parents, 398–399 diagrams, role in understanding the situation, 203 dialectical position, qualitative program evaluation, 348–349
Dignity and worth of the person value, NASW Code of Ethics, 39 Dillard, C., 75–76
direct observation, situation data collection, 206 direct practice: connections with others, 120–123; contextualized findings, 123; defined, 109; overview, 120; parallels to deductive qualitative analysis and grounded theory, 126–128; pattern theory, 123–125 discipline, in parent/child relationship when parent has psychiatric disability, 403–404, 409 distress and harm, preventing, 47–49 document review, qualitative program evaluation, 321–322 documents: ethnography, 150–151; situation analysis, 207 doll play, 416
domestic violence, 429–430; Family Violence Option, 253–254; handling victimization experiences, 250; Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, 253; Temporary Assistance to Needy Family program, 253 DQA (deductive qualitative analysis), 107; applications to practice research, 128–129; discussion, 129–131; induction and deduction, 110–113; links to direct practice, 120–128; overview, 107–110; types of initial conceptual models, 113–114 “drag and drop” coding, 294
DSS (department of social services), 308, 472
Du Bois, W. E. B., 68, 137
ECB (evidence-based practice), 9, 101 ecological fallacy, 125
ecological research, explaining child neglect, 446 economic globalization, 234 education: action learning as bridge to, 221; Council on Social Work Education, 3; Educational Policy and Accreditation Standards, 3; Group for the Advancement of Doctoral Education, 4; International Council for Adult Education, 214; as primary stage of action research, 217–220.
See also foster youth study educational authenticity, 97 Educational Policy and Accreditation Standards (CSWE), 3 efficacy research, policy-to-practice initiatives, 308

elites, interviewing, 258

embedding context, situations, 198–199

emic perspective: defined, 69;

empathic interviews, 86

empathy: need for, 126; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 446; in storytelling, 170 empowerment model, child neglect cases, 496 ending questions, focus group, 273–274

environmental signals, caregiving, 460

ephemera, collecting to understand the situation, 201 epistemology: connection of research question to, 9; critical race theory, 70–72; critical theory, 69–70; deconstructing, 65–68; defined, 63; locating researcher, 61–63; maintaining internal consistency of conclusions with, 25–26; positivist, 64; reconsidering, 68–69; research paradigm, 63–64; social work and research, 64–69; specifying, 10–13; standpoint theory, 72; theory integration, 72–76 ethics, social work, 14–15. See also NASW Code of Ethics ethics in qualitative research: acknowledging credit, 53; applied and professional ethics, 38; conflicts of interest and boundary issues, 49–50; ethics-related lessons, 54–55; formulation of research and evaluation questions, 39–40; healthcare ethics (bioethics), 38; informed consent, 41–43; institutional review, 43–44; overview, 35–39; preventing distress and harm, 47–49; privacy and confidentiality, 46–47; reporting results, 51–53; research and evaluation design, 45; sampling, 40–41; use of deception and coercion, 45–46

ethnicity, role in qualitative interviewing, 247–248 ethnography: autoethnography, 24, 142, 145; characteristics of, 142–144; data analysis, 157–158; defining, 138–142; documents, 150–151; ethnographic interviewing, 150; ethnographic microanalysis, 142; ethnographic research, 48; ethnography of communication, 142; field notes, 146–148; historical background of, 136–138; human instrument, 144–145; institutional, 142; interviewing, 148–150; narrative, 142; overview, 136; participant observation, 145–146; performance, 142; presentation, 158–159; qualitative program evaluation, 338–339; research process, 152–156; research product, 138; strengths and limitations of, 160–161; subjectivity, 160; urban, 137; visual data, 151–152

ethnology, 140 ethnomethodology, 140–141

etic perspective: defined, 69;

ethnographic research, 143

evaluability assessment, qualitative program evaluation, 334–336 evaluation questions, 39–40 evaluations: formative, 311; organizational, 307; process evaluation, 311, 313; summative, 311; U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 230–231; utilization-focused, 12. See also qualitative program evaluation evaluative criteria, qualitative research and reports, 11 evidence-based practice (EBP), 9, 101 exterior of situation, 194 face-to-face (in-person) interviews, 245, 255–256; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 450; physician/social worker collaboration study, 523 facilitator, focus group: adjourning stage, group development, 277; forming stage, group development, 275; norming stage, group development, 276; performing stage, group development, 276; skills of, 277–279; storming stage, group development, 276 family conflict, 429–430 family relationships, assessing young children's perceptions of: Attachment Story Completion Task, 418; conceptual framework, 414–416; implications for social work practice and research, 436; MacArthur Story-Stem Battery, 418–419; maturing capacities of children, 415; overview, 413–414; qualitative analyses, 433–436; symbolic representations, of attachment figures, 415 family violence, 429–430; Family Violence Option, 253–254; handling victimization experiences, 250; Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, 253; Temporary Assistance to Needy Family program, 253 Family Violence Option (FVO), 253–254 feminist ethnographers, 140 feminist interviewing, 248–249 field notes (note taking), 117–118, 279; ethnography, 146–148; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 452–453; thick description, 318, 321 fieldwork, ethnography, 138 flexibility: versus consistency, 244–245; focus groups, 266–267 flipchart, focus group facilitator’s use of, 279 focus groups: agenda, 271–274; characteristics of, 265–267; ending questions, 273–274; facilitator, 275–279; flexibility, 266–267; generating hypotheses with, 267–268; versus group interviewing, 242; introductory questions, 272–273; key questions, 273; logistics, 279–280; multiple groups, 268–270; opening question, 272; overview, 264, 271–272; purposive sampling, 270–271; qualitative program evaluation, 318; question sequencing, 272; report production, 281; round-robin format, questions, 272; sampling strategies, 270–271; stages of group development, 274–277; topic guide, 266; transition questions, 273; U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 225–226; when to use, 267–268 follow-up questions, qualitative interviewing, 258; follow-up interviews, psychiatric disability and parenting study, 397 formal interviews, ethnographic research, 149

formative evaluations, 311 “formulating a paradigm” process, 312–313 foster youth study: Aging Out documentary, 501; content and theme analysis process, 504; data collection and analysis, 503–512; discussion and implications for social work, 513–514; foster children versus foster youth, 501; human capital theory, 502; independent living program, 499; knowledge gap, 500; limitations of, 514; older foster youth, 501; overview, 499–500; results, 512–513; sample, 503; study design, 503; On Their Own: What Happens to Kids When They Age Out of the Foster Care System, 501 frame disputes, 199 Frazier, E. F., 124
free recall listing, qualitative interviewing, 257–258 funding: of action research, 232–233; constructivist social work research, 100
FVO (Family Violence Option), 253–254
Gamson, William, 170
GAOSW (Ghana Association of Social Workers), 226 gatekeepers, research setting, 154 gender: gender identity, 66; role in qualitative interviewing, 248–249; role in social work research, 351 generalization: case studies, 343–344; overview, 17–18
Ghana, School of Social Work, 226
Ghana Association of Social Workers (GAOSW), 226
Gilgun, J. F., 249–250
Glaser, B., 115
globalization: defined, 234n1; economic, 234n1; implications of action research for change agents, 233–234; social, 234n1 goals, case study, 13–14
Goffman, Erving, 137, 176, 199
Google Earth, 297
grand tour (descriptive) questions, qualitative interviewing, 150, 257 Greene, J., 348–349
grounded theory (GT), 25; applications to practice research, 128–129; approach to qualitative program evaluation, 312–313; axial coding, 119, 312, 527; coding, 118–119; constant comparative method, 396–397, 527; constructivist research, 92; data collection, 117–118; discussion, 129–131; later formulations, 116–117; links to direct practice, 120–128; open coding, 118–119, 312; original formulation, 115; overview, 107–108, 114–115; physician/social worker collaboration study, 523–524, 527–529; program evaluation, 312–313; psychiatric disability and parenting, 393; research questions and hypotheses, 119; theoretical sampling, 118 group development, focus group: adjourning, 277; forming, 275; norming, 276; overview, 274–275; performing, 276; storming, 275–276 Group for the Advancement of Doctoral Education, 4 group interviewing: versus focus groups, 242; qualitative program evaluation, 318 GT (grounded theory), 25: applications to practice research, 128–129; approach to qualitative program evaluation, 312–313; axial coding, 119, 312, 527; coding, 118–119; constant comparative method, 396–397, 527; constructivist research, 92; data collection, 117–118; discussion, 129–131; later formulations, 116–117; links to direct practice, 120–128; open coding, 118–119, 312; original formulation, 115; overview, 107–108, 114–115; physician/social worker collaboration study, 523–524, 527–529; psychiatric disability and parenting, 393; research questions and hypotheses, 119; theoretical sampling, 118 guided (semistructured) interviews, 202, 255; interview, guide 318; foster youth study, 503; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 449; phenomenological approach, caseworker/parent relationship case study, 473–474; psychiatric disability and parenting study, 396 Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), 204–205 hegemony, critical theory and, 70
hierarchical theory, 124
HIV/AIDS: epidemic, 193; using situation analysis to understand women’s access to services for, 204–210
Hoskins, M., 89
hostile/negative stories, NSST, 422
HRSA (Health Resources and Services Administration), 204–205
Huberman, A., 339–340
Hull House, 111
human capital theory, 502 human instrument (researcher), ethnography, 144–145. See also researchers human relationships value, NASW Code of Ethics, 39 hyperlinks, 286
HyperRESEARCH program, 300, 301
hypertext, constructivist research reports, 99 hypotheses: deductive qualitative analysis, 113; defined, 108; generating with focus groups, 267–268; grounded theory, 119; working hypotheses, 111 identifying: potential biases and researcher self-reflection, 23–25; relationships within data, 295–296; stakeholders, 201; study goals and audience, 13–14 identity, framing, 66
illness narratives, 171, 182–183
ILP (independent living program), 499 immersive research reports, 92, 93 impressionistic tales, 98, 159 independent living program (ILP), 499
in-depth interviews, 120 indicated case, child neglect, 471 indices of social adjustment, NSST and, 425 induction, DQA, 110–113
informal (unstructured) interviews, 148–149, 244–245, 254, 449 informants, closeness of contact to researchers, 121–122 Information and Technology Department (ITD), Cape Peninsula University of Technology, 225 informed consent: ethics and, 41–43; formal interviews, ethnographic research, 149 infrastructure development, role of social welfare evaluations in, 309 initial conceptual models, DQA, 113–114 innovation, in qualitative program evaluation, 349–350 in-person (face-to-face) interviews, 245, 255–256; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 450; physician/social worker collaboration study, 523 inputs, open systems, 360–361 insecure attachments, attachment theory, 415 institutional ethnography, 142
institutional review board (IRB), 44–45, 86, 472 Integrity value, NASW Code of Ethics, 39
interactionism, qualitative program evaluation, 338–339 interactive themes, NSST, 424
interdependency concept, open systems, 360 interdisciplinary teams, 518. See also physician/social worker collaboration study interior of situation, 194 internal working models, attachment theory, 415–416 International Congress of Qualitative Inquiry, 3
International Council for Adult Education, 214
International Guidelines for Biomedical Research Involving Human Subjects, 37 International Participatory Research Network, 214 interpersonal relationships: bipolar disorders, 409–410; child with parent with psychiatric disability, 403–406; impact of psychiatric disability on, 400–401. See also family relationships, assessing young children’s perceptions of intersubjective information, situation analysis, 206–207 interventions, child neglect cases, 496 interviewing: interviewer distress, 252; interviewer impressions guide, physician/social worker collaboration study, 529; interview guide, group interviews and focus groups, 318 interviews: Adult Attachment Interview, 426; assessing young children’s perceptions of family relationships, 416; caseworker/parent relationship case study, 473–474, 476–486; conducting, 255–257; cross-cultural interviewing, 247–248; empathic, 86;
Index

ethnography, 148–150; face-to-face (in-person), 245, 255–256, 450, 523; formal, ethnographic research, 149; foster youth study, 503; group interviewing, 242, 318; in-depth, 120; open-ended, 117, 254–255; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 449–453; physician/social worker collaboration study, 523, 525–527; psychiatric disability and parenting study, 396–397; semistructured (guided), 202, 255, 396, 449, 473–474, 503; structured (standardized; conventional) interviews, 244, 254, 316–317; telephone interviews, 503; unstructured (informal) interviews, 148–149, 244–245, 254, 449. See also qualitative interviewing introductory questions, focus group, 272–273

investigating situations, 197

IRB (institutional review board), 44–45, 86, 472

ironic validity, 96

Israel, B. A., 215

ITD (Information and Technology Department), Cape Peninsula University of Technology, 225

joint participation, constructivist research, 85–86

key informants, ethnographic interviewing, 150

key questions, focus group, 273

key resource controllers, environmental scan, 374

key success factors (KSFs), environmental scans, 374

Kincheloe, J. L., 76

knowledge: knowledge building, 107–108, 112; knowledge synthesis, policy-to-practice initiatives, 308

Konopka, Giesela, 121

KSFs (key success factors), environmental scans, 374

Kvale, S., 95–96

Labov, William, 172

Laird, J., 148

language: qualitative interview process, 251; role in ethnography studies, 139

Lather, P., 96, 351–352

Latour, B., 83

Lazarsfeld, Paul, 264

leadership, decision-making, 361 learning, action: defined, 221; incorporated within U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 228 learning objectives, situation, 202

LeCompte, M., xi, 17, 140

Leininger, M., 12–13

Leisey, M., 86–87

Lewin, Kurt, 214

Lewins, A. & Silver, C., 282–287

listening to characters of the play (situation analysis), 201–202 literature: child maltreatment, 468–470; physician/social worker collaboration study, 519–523; use in ethnographic research, 152–153

locating meanings in context, 21–22

location, of focus groups, 279–280

Lofland, John, 339

Lofland, Lyn, 339

logico-deductive research, 125
Index

logistics, focus group: location, 279–280; name tags/tents, 280; overview, 279; refreshments, 280; room setup, 280
Loka Institute, 219
Look, Think, Act process, action research: collaborative partnerships for research and advocacy, 226; overview, 217–220; “Use of Technology as a Means of Empowerment” teleconference workshop, 226 loose conceptual framework, DQA, 113–114
Lorenz, W., 351–352
Lynd, Helen, 137
Lynd, Robert, 137
MacArthur Story-Stem Battery (MSSB), 418–419, 437–438
major categories, content and theme analysis process, 504, 508–511 Malinowski, Bronislaw, 137
Manchester Child Attachment Story Task (MCAST), 426 manuals, data analysis software, 300 maps, role in understanding the situation, 201, 203
Marcus, G. E.: role of theory in ethnographic research, 140; Writing Culture, 138 Massachusetts Department of Social Services (DSS), 308 mastering the story of the play (situation analysis), 200–201 masters of social work (MSW), 525 maturing capacities, of children, 415 MAXQDA program, 300, 301
MCAST (Manchester Child Attachment Story Task), 426
McClelland, Marlene, 146
Mead, George Herbert, 137 meaning: constructivist research, 82; social reference groups and, 84 member checking, ethnographic research, 158–159 memos: creating with computer software, 293; field notes, 118 mental illness and parenting: bipolar disorders, 409–410; chaotic interpersonal relationships, 400–401; child custody issues, 402–403; data collection and analysis, 396–397; effects of stigma, 399–400; grounded theory methods, 393; interviews, 396; methodical implications, 408–410; National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, 399; overview, 391–393; pride in being parent, 408; problems with diagnosis and treatment, 398–399; relationships with children, 403–406; sampling methods, 393–395; serious and persistent mental illness, 394; severe mood disorders, 394; social support, 406–407; strain of single parenthood, 401–402; study participants, 395–396 men versus women, communication styles, 249 Merton, Robert, 264
messy text reports, constructivist research, 99–100 methodical implications, of psychiatric disability of parent, 408–410 methodological depth, qualitative program evaluation, 349–350 methodological rationale, physician/social worker collaboration study, 523–524

Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu methodological triangulation, 158. See also triangulation technique, data collection methodology: data analysis methods, 20; data collection methods, 18–20; defined, 63; interpretive criteria for qualitative data analysis, 20–26; sampling, 16–17; transferability/generalization, 17–18 Meyer, Manulani Aluli, 74–75
microprocesses, qualitative program evaluation, 337–338 Miles, M., 339–340
Miller, Gale, 338
Mills, C. Wright, 170
Mishler, Elliot, 172
mission-based management, organizational decision-making, 362–363 Mitchell, J. Clyde, 194 mixed methods approach: advantages of, 501–502; program evaluation of county psychiatric emergency service, 323–324; qualitative program evaluation, 310–311, 347–349 models: defined, 109; DQA, 113–114; internal working models, attachment theory, 415–416; physician/social worker collaboration study, 531–534, 543; project interrelationship model, U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 222–228; relational contextual model, child neglect, 463–464; Snyder Evaluation Model, 313–314 mortal neglect, 454
MSSB (MacArthur Story-Stem Battery), 418–419, 437–438
MSW (masters of social work), 525 multimedia analytic tools, 297 multimedia data: challenges of publishing multimedia qualitative research, 290–291; overview, 289–290 multiple case studies, 343 multiple groups: group composition, 269; overview, 268; status, 269–270; topic, 269 multisite team qualitative research, 288–289 multivocality, 90
Murray, M. J., 45–46, 52
Myerhoff, Barbara, 171
name tags, for focus group participants, 280
NAMI (National Alliance for the Mentally Ill), 399 naming situations, 196 narrative approaches: narrative content coding, NSST, 424; narrative data analysis, 91–92; Narrative Emotion Coding (NEC), 424; narrative ethnography, 142; narrative inquiry, 48; narratives, 71. See also narrative story-stem technique; personal narratives narrative story-stem technique (NSST): age of subjects, 417; attachment organization and characteristics of caregiving environment, 425–427; basic characteristics of, 417–418; child maltreatment, 428–429; coding, 420–424; family violence and family conflict, 429–430; indices of social adjustment and, 425; interactive themes, 424; narrative content coding, 424; Narrative Emotion Coding, 424;
narrative story-stem technique (continued) narrative structure and process coding, 424; overview, 413–414; procedural outline for administration of, 419–420; selection of story stems, 418–419; warm-up story, 419; wind-down story, 420 narrative structure and process coding, NSST, 424 narrators, positioning of self in personal narrative, 177
NASW (National Association of Social Workers) Code of Ethics, 38–39, 42, 122; conflicts of interest and boundary issues, 50; “do no harm” concept, 48; privacy and confidentiality, 47; reporting results, 51
National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI), 399
National Incidence Study of Child Abuse and Neglect, 468–469 National Institutes of Health, Office of Behavioral and Social Sciences Research, 4 naturalistic ethnographic research, 42, 142–143, 155. See also observation NEATS (neurobiology, executive function, attachment, trauma, and self-regulation), 129 NEC (Narrative Emotion Coding), 424 needs assessment, qualitative program evaluation as tool for, 310 negative case analysis, 115 neglect, child: empowerment model, 496; indicated case, 471; interventions, 496; mortal neglect, 454; National Incidence Study of Child Abuse and Neglect, 468–469; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 446–465; strength-based perspective, 496; substantiated case, 471. See also caseworker/parent relationship case study nested framework concept, 66–67 network maps, data analysis software, 296 neurobiology, executive function, attachment, trauma, and self-regulation (NEATS), 129 NGOs (non-governmental organizations): Nigeria, partnerships with, 227; Peru, understanding relationship patterns, 316–317 Nigeria, collaborative partnerships for research and advocacy, 226–227 nodes, NVivo, 322–323
nominal group techniques, organizational decision-making, 371–372 nomothetic research, 125 non-governmental organizations (NGOs): Nigeria, partnerships with, 227; Peru, understanding relationship patterns, 316–317 nonlinear nature, action research, 218 nonverbal cues, qualitative interviewing, 245, 248–249 norming stage, group development, 276 note taking (field notes), 117–118, 279; ethnography, 146–148; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 452–453; thick description, 318, 321
NSST (narrative story-stem technique): age of subjects, 417; attachment organization and characteristics of caregiving environment, 425–427; basic characteristics of, 417–418; child maltreatment, 428–429;
Index

coding, 420–424; family violence and family conflict, 429–430; indices of social adjustment and, 425; interactive themes, 424; narrative content coding, 424; Narrative Emotion Coding, 424; narrative structure and process coding, 424; overview, 413–414; procedural outline for administration of, 419–420; selection of story stems, 418–419; warm-up story, 419; wind-down story, 420

Nuremberg Code, 36
NVivo, 297, 300; coding, 322; nodes, 322–323; website, 301

objective information, situation analysis, 206–207 objectivity: participatory research, 315; personal narrative, 169, 181 O’Brien, R., 215, 221 observation, 117; caseworker/parent relationship case study, 452, 486; connecting with others, 120–121; naturalistic ethnographic research, 42, 142–143, 155; participant observation, 145–146; qualitative program evaluation, 318, 321; situation data collection, 206, 452 observer as participant role, ethnology, 146 observer comments, 117–118 online resources, data analysis software, 301 ontological authenticity, 97
ontology, 63
open coding, grounded theory, 118–119, 312 open-ended questions and interviews, 117, 254–255; formal interviews, ethnographic research, 149; foster youth study, 503; structured individual interviews, 316–317 opening question, focus groups, 272 open systems: defined, 360; inputs, 360–361; interdependency concept, 360; outputs, 360; throughputs, 360 organization: defined, 360; tangible capacity of, 376 organizational decision-making, application of qualitative research to, 358–387; cognitive mapping, 370–371; defining organization, 360–361; environmental scans, 373–375; leadership, 361; nominal group techniques, 371–372; Office of Disability Prevention, 359, 365–373; overview, 358–359; strategic decision-making, 362–363; strategic management, 363–383; strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats analysis, 377–379; tangible capacity of organization, 376; threats, opportunities, weaknesses, and strengths matrix, 379–382. See also action research organizational evaluation, 307 outcomes: action research, 215, 313; analyzing, qualitative program evaluation, 339–341 output options, data analysis software, 294 outputs: open systems, 360; value chain concept, 377 paralogical validity, 96 parenting: child custody and psychiatric disability, 399–400, 402–403; single parenthood, 401–402. See also caseworker/parent relationship case study; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study; psychiatric disability and parenting parenting in conditions of urban poverty study: analysis process, 456–458; analyzing poverty’s role, 461–462; caregiving moments, 459–460; child signals, caregiving, 460; data analysis, 453–456; environmental signals, caregiving, 460; findings, 462–465; mortal neglect, 454; overview, 447; representations of caregiving, 461; sample description, 448–449; sampling, 447–448; sensitizing concepts, 455–456; “theory of caregiving,” 454–455 parents: pride in being parent, 408; problems with diagnosis and treatment of psychiatric disabilities, 398–399 Park, Robert E., 137
Parker, Laurence, 71 participant observation, 145–146
participants: closeness of contact to researchers, 121–122; establishing rapport between researcher and, 251–252; focus groups, 269–270, 318; group interviews, 318; psychiatric disability and parenting study, 395–396; recruiting, 259; taking on teacher and informer role, 250 participatory research: action research, 28, 215–216; approach to qualitative program evaluation, 314–316 partnerships: collaborative, 226–228, 234n5; youth development partnerships, 308–309. See also U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project pattern matching, DQA, 113 pattern theory, 123–125
Patton, M. Q., 340–341, 530, 539 performance ethnography, 142 performatively analyzing personal narratives, 176–181 performing stage, group development, 276 personality disorders, parenting and, 394 Personal Narratives Group, 181
personal resources, researcher, 65–66
Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, 253

Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu
Index

perspective, of individual in situation:
ascertaining, 203; comparing and
contrastng, 204
PES (psychiatric emergency service)
evaluation, 323–325
photographs: role in understanding situations, 201, 203; use in
ethnographic research, 151
photovoice research method, constructivist research, 100
physical structures, situations, 198, 202–203
physician/social worker collaboration study: application of grounded theory, 527–529; decision-making, patient care, 522; development of dimensions from the data, 529–534; diachronic reporting, 525–526; in-person interviews, 523;
tveneer impressions guide, 529; interviews, 525–527; literature review, 519–523; methodological rationale, 523–524; overview, 517–519; psychosocial aspects, patient care, 521–522, 528; setting and subjects, 524–525; traditional collaboration model, 531–534;
transformational collaboration model, 531–534; transitional
collaboration model, 531–534;
trustworthiness and credibility, 537–539; typology, 534–540
play and cognitive development:
attachment theory and internal working models, 415–416; overview, 414–415
play metaphor, situation analysis, 200–203
Plummer, Ken, 170
policy-to-practice initiatives, evaluating, 308
polyvocality, 90–91, 98–99 Popper, K. R., 111–112
portraying relationships within data, 295–296
positionality, personal narrative, 181
positivist epistemology, 64
postmodern ethnographers, 139 poverty: parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 446–465; role in child neglect, 469. See also caseworker/parent relationship case study power, role in qualitative interviewing, 246–247
practitioner/observer, strategic management, 364
practitioner role, 250–251
pragmatic approach, qualitative interviewing, 243, 253
pragmatic validation, 95–96
preconceptions, researchers starting with, 115
preparing for interview, 259 presentation: content and theme analysis process, foster youth study, 512; of data analysis, 158–159
pride in being parent, 408 privacy, 46–47
probes, qualitative interviewing, 258 process evaluation: defined, 311; Snyder Evaluation Model, 313
processing data: qualitative program evaluation, 322–323; triangulation, 322 professional epistemology, 63
professional strangers, ethnographic research, 144
Index

project director, U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 228–230 project interrelationship model, U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project, 222–228; collaborative partnerships for research and advocacy, 226–228; focus group meetings, 225–226; Summer Study Tour to Africa, 223–225

Project South, 218–219

props, NSST, 417–418

psychiatric disability and parenting: bipolar disorders, 409–410; chaotic interpersonal relationships, 400–401; child custody issues, 402–403; data collection and analysis, 396–397; effects of stigma, 399–400; grounded theory methods, 303; interviews, 396; methodical implications, 408–410; National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, 399; overview, 391–393; pride in being parent, 408; problems with diagnosis and treatment, 398–399; relationships with children, 403–406; sampling methods, 393–395; serious and persistent mental illness, 394; severe mood disorders, 394; social support, 406–407; strain of single parenthood, 401–402; study participants, 395–396 psychiatric emergency service (PES) evaluation, 323–325 psychological research, explaining child neglect, 446

psychosocial aspects, patient care, 521–522, 528

publishing multimedia qualitative research, 290–291

Pulice, R., 335

purposive sampling, focus groups, 270–271

qualitative data analysis software. See data analysis software

Qualitative Inquiry journal, 84

qualitative interviewing: of children, 258; closed-ended questions, 149, 258; conducting interviews, 255–257; designing questions, 257–258; of elites, 258; establishing rapport between researcher and participant, 251–252; face-to-face (in-person) interviews, 245, 255–257; flexibility versus consistency, 244–245; focus group interviewing, 242; follow-up questions, 258; free recall listing, 257–258; grand tour questions, 150, 257; group interviewing, 242; in-person (face-to-face) interviews, 450, 523; interviewer distress, 252; language, 251; managing complex and sensitive topics, 245–246; monitoring bias of researcher, 252; nonverbal cues, 245; overview, 241–242; paradigm debate, 243; participant taking on teacher and informer role, 250; practitioner role versus researcher role, 250–251; pragmatic approach to, 243; probes, 258; purpose of, 253–254; role of power, gender, ethnicity, and class, 246–249; semistructured (guided), 202, 255, 396, 449.
473–474, 503; semistructured (guided) interviews, 255; sensitizing questions, 257; sequencing of questions, 258; steps of interview, 259–260; structured (standardized; conventional) interviews, 244, 254, 316–317; telephone interviews, 255–257, 503; training and skills, 249–252; types of interviews, 254–255; unstructured (informal) interviews, 244–245, 254; wording of questions, 258 qualitative program evaluation: action research approach, 313–314; case studies, 341–346; causal networks, 339–340; change-process research, 337; community planning and infrastructure development, 309; community programs, 309–310; data collection, 316–322; designs and social work outcomes, 333–341; dialectical position, 348–349; document review, 321–322; empirical agenda, 352–353; focus groups, 318; formative evaluations, 311; futures market in, 346–353; generalization of case studies, 343–344; grounded theory approach, 312–313; group interviews, 318; “hanging out” approach, 311; involving consumers and stakeholder groups, 309; multiple case studies, 343; observation, 318, 321; organizational evaluation, 307; overview, 307, 328–329; participatory research approach, 314–316; policy-to-practice initiatives, 308; process evaluations, 311; processing data, 322–323; psychiatric emergency service evaluation, 323–325; purposes of, 308–310; simulations, 336–337; Snyder Evaluation Model, 313–314; social work knowledge, 329–333; stakeholder-focused evaluability assessment, 335; structured individual interviews, 316–317; summative evaluations, 311; systemic evaluation, 307; system-level interventions, 308–309; as tool for needs assessment, 310; when to use, 310–311 qualitative research: explicitly maintaining social work ethics, 14–15; identifying potential biases and researcher self-reflection, 23–25; identifying study goals and audience, 13–14; maintaining internal consistency of conclusions with epistemology and methods, 25–26; overview, 3–6, 10; research question and connection to epistemology, 9; roles of data and interpretation in, 6–7; science and, 7–9; specifying study methodology, 15–16; specifying study’s epistemology, 10–13; standards and qualitative inquiry, 26–28

Qualitative Social Work, 349–350

quality and rigor, in constructivist research, 94 quantitative methods in qualitative research: quantitative data, collecting to understand the situation, 201; quantitative interviewing, 253; quantitative methodology, physician/social worker collaboration study, 524 queries within coded materials, data analysis software, 295 questions, ethnographic interview, 150, 153–154 questions, focus group: ending questions, 273–274; introductory questions, 272–273; key questions, 273; opening question, 272; question sequencing, 272; transition questions, 273 questions, qualitative interviews: closed-ended questions, 149, 258; designing, 257–258; follow-up questions, 258; free recall listing, 257–258; grand tour questions, 150, 257; probes, 258; sensitizing questions, 257; sequencing of questions, 258; wording of questions, 258 rapport: cross-cultural interviewing, 247; establishing between researcher and participant, 251–252, 259 raw data files, 292 Readiness to Adopt Self-Survey (RASS), 129 realist tales: constructivist research reports, 98; ethnographic research, 159 reality, nature of, xvii, 21, 70, 82–93, 172 reference groups, 83–84

reflexivity/reflective: reflective practitioners, 50; reflexive ethnographic research, 143; reflexivity, researcher, 65–66, 91 reformist and radical agenda, qualitative program evaluation, 351–352 refreshments, for focus groups, 280 Reid, Bill (William J.), 337, 347
relational constructivist research, 87 relational contextual model, child neglect, 463–464 relationships: child with parent with psychiatric disability, 403–406; effect of bipolar disorders on, 409–410; identifying and portraying within data, 295–296; interpersonal, impact of psychiatric disability on, 400–401; social behavior in external relationships, 430–433. See also family relationships, assessing young children’s perceptions of; psychiatric disability and parenting reliability, of analysis, 287 religion, compared to spirituality, 74–75 reporting results: diachronic reporting, 525–526; ethics and, 51–53 reports, focus group, 281 representative examples, NSST coding: categorical classification systems, 422–423; continuous measures, 423–425; overview, 422 researchers: closeness of contact to informants, 121–122; establishing rapport with participant, 251–252, 259; as ethnographic research instrument, 144–145; inability of computer software to do job of, 287; monitoring bias, 252; parenting in conditions of urban poverty study, 449–450, 452; versus practitioners, 250–251; as professional strangers (ethnographic research), 144 “Research for Action: University and Community Partnerships” teleconference, 219–220 research paradigm, 63–64
research process, ethnography, 152–156

Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu
research product, ethnography, 138 research questions: connection to epistemology, 9; defining, 87–88; ethics and, 39–40; ethnographic interview, 150, 153–154; focus group, 272–274; grounded theory, 119. See also questions, qualitative interviews responses, content and theme analysis process, 504
restitution narratives, 183
Revans, Reginald, 221
rhizomatic validity, 96
rich description, situation, 204 Riessman, C. K., 91–92, 352
“right to know,” 52
Rodwell, M. K., 90, 92, 335–336 role reversal, in parent/child relationship when parent has psychiatric disability, 404–405, 409 room setup, focus groups, 280 round-robin format, focus group questions, 272
Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS
Resources Emergency (CARE) Act of 2000, 204–205
Salgo v. Leland Stanford Jr. University Board of Trustees (1957), 41
sampling: constructivist research, 90– 91; ethics and, 40–41; overview,
16–17; parenting in conditions
of urban poverty study, 447–448;
purposive sampling, 270–271;
snowball sampling, 270–271;
thematic sampling, 393–395
saturation (completeness), qualitative data analysis and sampling, 22–23 SBHCPs (school-based health care programs), 265
Schepers-Hughes, Nancy, 454
Schloendorff v. Society of New York Hospital (1914), 41
scholarships for foster youth. See foster youth study
school based health care programs (SBHCPs), 265
School of Public Health, University at Albany, 225
School of Social Welfare, University at Albany: focus group meetings, 225–226; Summer Study Tour to Africa, 223–224
School of Social Work (Ghana), 226
Schütz, Alfred, 81
science, qualitative research and,
7–9
search functions, data analysis
software, 294
secure attachments, attachment theory, 415
secure/confident stories, NSST, 422
segmenting data files, 290–291, 297 Seibold, C., 50
selective coding, 119
self-assessment, Office of Disability Prevention, 376
self-disclosure, researcher, 123
self-reflection, researcher, 67; data analysis process, 91; identifying, 23–25
self-stigma, 178
semistructured (guided) interviews, 202, 255; foster youth study,
503; parenting in conditions
of urban poverty study, 449;
phenomenological approach,
caseworker/parent relationship case study, 473–474; psychiatric disability and parenting study, 396 sensitizing concepts, 111, 455–456 sensitizing questions, qualitative interviewing, 257 Separation Anxiety Test, 416 sequencing of questions: focus groups, 272; qualitative interviews, 258 serious and persistent mental illness (SPMI), 394 severe mood disorders, 394
shadowing study participants, 149 short cycle evaluation, Snyder Evaluation Model, 313–314 simulations, qualitative program evaluation, 336–337 Sinclair, I., 344–345, 347 single parenthood, 401–402 situation analysis: additional tasks, 203–204; archival research methods, 201; behavioral settings, 198–199; Community Research Group, 192–193; cuing system, 199; culture, role in understanding situation, 201; “defining the situation” process, 196–198; diagrams, role in understanding situation, 203; direct observation, situation data collection, 206; documents, 207; embedding context, 198–199; ephemera, collecting to understand situation, 201; exterior of situation, 194; frame disputes, 199; Health Resources and Services Administration, 204–205; high-risk situations, 193; HIV/AIDS epidemic, 193; identifying stakeholders, 201; interior of situation, 194; intersubjective information, 206–207; investigating situations, 197; learning objectives, 202; listening to characters of play, 201–202; maps, role in understanding situation, 201, 203; mastering the story of the play, 200–201; naming situations, 196; objective information, 206–207; observation, situation data collection, 206; overview, 192–195; performing, 199–203; perspective, of individual in situation, 203–204; photos, role in understanding situation, 201, 203; physical structures, 202–203; play metaphor, 200–203; preparing description, 204; quantitative data, collecting to understand situation, 201; role of context in understanding high-risk situations, 193–194; Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS Resources Emergency Act, 204–205; semi-structured interviews, 202; social epidemics, 193; stakeholders, identifying, 201; studying stage set, 202–203; subjective information, 206–207; subjectivities, 199; Thomas theorem, 197–198; using to understand women’s access to HIV/AIDS services, 204–210 skills, qualitative interviewing, 249–252 Skultans, Vieda, 171
Smythe, W. E., 45–46, 52
snowball sampling, 270–271
Snyder Evaluation Model: outcome evaluation, 313; process evaluation, 313; psychiatric emergency service evaluation, 323; short cycle evaluation, 313–314 social behavior, in external relationships, 430–433 social constructs, situation, 198 social ecology, 137
social globalization, 234n1
social groups, 83–84
Social justice value, NASW Code of Ethics, 39 social positioning, personal narratives, 177 social structures, situation, 198 social support, of parents with psychiatric disability, 406–407 social welfare evaluations. See qualitative program evaluation social work and research: as advocacy function, 65; deconstructing epistemology, 65–68; ethics, explicitly maintaining, 14–15; overview, 64–65; reconsidering epistemology, 68–69 social workers. See physician/social worker collaboration study social work knowledge, classifying, 329–333 Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR), 3, 349 socioeconomic status, 461–462. See also poverty sociological research, explaining child neglect, 446 software, data analysis: ATLAS.ti program, 294, 296–297, 300; audio files, 291; Boolean queries, 295; choosing, 298–301; coding images with, 290–291; coding process, 293–294; Computer Assisted Qualitative Data Analysis project, 299; creating subsets of materials to focus analysis, 295; “drag and drop” coding, 294; getting started, 292–293; HyperRESEARCH, 300; identifying and visually portraying relationships within data, 295–296; learning to use, 297–298; manuals, 300; MAXQDA, 300; memos and annotations, 293; multimedia analytic tools, 297; multimedia data, 289–291; multisite team qualitative research, 288–289; NVivo, 300; online resources, 301; organizing and analyzing text-based research, 286–287; output options and backing up work, 294; overview, 284–285; queries within coded materials, 295; raw data files, 292; search functions, 294; segmenting images with, 290–291; software-based qualitative analysis project, 292; video files, 291; Weitzman and Miles sourcebook, 299; what computer software does not do, 287–288; word counts and statistical functions, 296 South Africa (Women on Farms Project), 226 spiral process, action research, 217–220 spirituality, compared to religion, 74–75
SPMI (serious and persistent mental illness), 394
SSTA (Summer Study Tour to Africa), 223–225, 234n3 Stake, R., 342, 344, 349 stakeholders: identifying, situation analysis, 201; involving stakeholder groups in evaluation methods, 309; stakeholder-focused evaluability assessment, 335 standardized (structured) interviews, 244, 254, 316–317 standards, qualitative research, 26–28 standpoint theory: overview, 72; theory integration, 72–76 statistical analysis, 114
statistical functions, data analysis software, 296 Steinberg, S., 76
stereotyping, 124–125. See also bias, researcher Stewart, William, 37
stigma, of psychiatric disability in parenting situation, 399–400 storming stage, group development, 275–276
story stems, NSST, 418–419
storytelling, 169–170
straddlers, physician/social worker collaboration study, 535 strategic decision-making, 362–363 strategic management: active listening, 363; practitioner/observer, 364; strategic planning protocol, 364–365. See also Office of Disability Prevention Strauss, A., 115–117, 137 strength-based perspective, child neglect cases, 496 strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats (SWOT) analysis, 377–379 Stringer, E. T., 215, 217–218 structural questions, ethnographic interview, 150 structured interviews, 244, 254, 316–317 studying the stage set (situation analysis), 202–203 subjectivity: ethnography, 160; personal narrative, 181; situation analysis, 199, 206–207 substance abuse, parenting and, 394 substantiated case, child neglect, 471 summary of findings, focus group report, 281 summative evaluations, 311
Summer Study Tour to Africa (SSTA), 223–225, 234n3 support for foster youth. See foster youth study survey research, qualitative program evaluation, 350–351 SWOT (strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats) analysis, 377–379 symbolic representations, of attachment figures, 415 systemic data analysis, 91–92
systemic evaluation, 307 system-level interventions, evaluating, 308–309 systems theory: caseworker/parent relationship case study, 493–494; organizational decision-making, 362 table tents, for focus group participants, 280 tactical authenticity, 97
TANF (Temporary Assistance to Needy Family) program, 253, 447 tangible capacity, organization, 376
TAT (thematic apperception test), 416 Taylor, S., 345–346
team-based qualitative research, 288–289 telephone interviews, 255–256, 503 temporal ordering, narratives, 172 Temporary Assistance to Needy Family (TANF) program, 253, 447 text-based research: constructivist research, 98–99; organizing and analyzing with data analysis software, 286–287 thematic apperception test (TAT), 416 theoretical sampling: grounded theory, 118; psychiatric disability and parenting, 393–394 theoretical triangulation. See triangulation technique, data collection theory: defined, 109; role in data collection and analysis, 453–456; role in ethnographic research, 140; theory integration, 72–76 theory-guided research, DQA, 113–114 “theory of caregiving,” 454–455 thick description: ethnography, 148; field notes, 318, 321; of grounded theory and deductive qualitative analysis, 123
Thomas, W. I., 137
Thomas theorem, 197–198 threats, opportunities, weaknesses, and strengths (TOWS) matrix, 379–382. See also SWOT analysis throughputs, open systems, 360
Tijerina, M., 98
Tizard, J., 345
toolbox metaphor, 88
topic guide, focus group, 266 TOWS (threats, opportunities, weaknesses, and strengths) matrix, 379–382. See also SWOT analysis traditional collaboration model, physician/social worker collaboration study, 531–534, 542 training, qualitative interviewing, 249–252 Transana website, 301
transferability, defined, 17–18 transformational collaboration model, physician/social worker collaboration study, 531–534, 544 transitional collaboration model, physician/social worker collaboration study, 531–534, 543 transition questions, focus group, 273 Trend, M. G., 348
triangulation technique, data collection: observations and, 321; theoretical, 157–158; validity and, 88–89, 95
Trumbull, D., 344
trustworthiness, physician/social worker collaboration study, 537–539 “truths,” personal narrative, 181–184 turning points, narratives, 183
Tuskegee syphilis study, 36, 45
21st Century Nanotechnology Research and Development Act (2003), 219 Tyler, F., 66–67
typology, physician/social worker collaboration study: applying to whole sample, 534–535; intellectual and professional underpinnings of, 535–537; reflections on constructing and utilizing, 539–540. See also physician/social worker collaboration study University at Albany: School of Public Health, 225; School of Social Welfare, 223–224, 225–226 university recognition, of action research, 231–233 unstructured (informal) interviews, 148–149, 244–245, 254, 449 urban ethnography, 137
urban poverty. See parenting in conditions of urban poverty study U.S.–Africa Partnership for Building Stronger Communities Project: action learning process incorporated within, 228–229; evaluation of, 230–231; overview, 222; preparation for next stage of action research, 230–231; project interrelationship model, 222–228; roles of project director, 228–230

“Use of Technology as a Means of Empowerment” teleconference workshop, 226 utilization-focused evaluation, qualitative research and reports, 12 validity: communicative, 95; in constructivist research, 94–98; ironic, 96; paralogical, 96; rhizomatic, 96; transgressive forms of, 96; triangulation data collection technique and, 88–89, 95; voluptuous, 96 value chain concept, 377 values, constructivist research and, 85–87; influence of researcher’s personal values, 112, 143, 146, 160; influence of participants’ values, 314, 330; social work values and ethics in qualitative research, xxi–xxiii, 28, 35–53, 86, 97, 139, 160–161; role of values in qualitative research, xviii–xix, 38, 109, 244; value-driven research xvii, 69–72, 85, 243

van Dyk, A.C., 216

Van Maanen, J.: report formats for constructivist research, 98; ways ethnographers describe studies, 159

van Rooyen, Colin, 217

victimization experiences, managing emotional distress of researcher, 252 videorecordings, use in qualitative research, xvi, 19, 99, 117,151–152, 290; analyzing video recording, 291 violence, family, 429–430; Family Violence Option, 253–254; handling victimization experiences, 250; Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, 253; Temporary Assistance to Needy Family program, 253 virtual focus group meetings, 225 visual data, ethnography, 151–152

volunteering, as way to conduct ethnographic research, 153, 155

voluptuous validity, 96

Waldrop, D., 54

warm-up story, NSST, 419

Weitzman and Miles sourcebook, 299

Wholey, H., 335

Whyte, William Foote, 137

Willowbrook State Hospital, 37, 45

wind-down story, NSST, 420

Witkin, S. L., 121

women: feminist interviewing, 248–249; versus men, communication styles, 249; women’s access to HIV/AIDS services, 204–210

Women on Farms Project (South Africa), 226

Woody, D., 335–336

Woolgar, S., 83

word counts, data analysis software, 296

wording of questions, qualitative interviews, 258 working hypotheses, 111

youth development partnerships, 308–309