INDEX

abrogation of authority by supervisors, 69–72
absenteeism, 41–42
abuse, as source of stress, 173
acceptance, atmosphere of, 130–131 accountability: versus autonomy, 341–342; balancing autonomy and, 329–330 achievement: promoting in supportive supervision, 190; as source of job satisfaction, 129 active involvement, in learning, 134–135 actively engaging learner in assessment, 140 adaptations, supervisee, as source of support, 196 administration: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; change agent, supervisor as, 51–52; conflicts between profession and bureaucracy, 340–342; influence on task delegation, 40; interminable supervision and debureaucratization, 330–333; practices enhancing supervisory authority, 68; role of, 10; sexism and, 343–344; supervisor evaluation by, 269; working with, problems related to, 236–238. See also supervisory authority and power administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51 administrative objectives of evaluation, 250 administrative supervision: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; change agent, supervisor as, 51–53; communication function, 43–48; continued, 326; coordinating work, 42–43; definitions of, 8–9, 11–14; educational supervision and, 93–96; and evaluation, 270–271; explaining supervision, 32–33; good supervisor characteristics, 243; inducting and placing workers, 30–32; in managed care context, 335–336; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating work, 40–42; organizational bureaucracy, 27–28; overview, 160; as source of stress, 167; staff recruitment and selection, 28–30; and supportive supervision, 161; value of evaluation to, 249; work assignment, 34–37; work delegation, 37–40; work planning, 33–34 —problems in implementation: disciplinary action, 87–89; noncompliance, 81–87; rules, functional value of, 78–81; vicarious liability, 54–57. See also supervisory authority and power administrator, good supervisor as, 243. See also administration adult learning. See learning advancement, as source of job satisfaction, 129 advocate role of supervisor, 48–49
Affordable Care Act of 2010, 338–339
African American supervisees, 222–223 agency system: accountability to community, 21; administrative and educational supervision in, 94; change agent, supervisor as, 51; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 212–213; evaluation use in, 263–264; and expert power, 65–66; external control of policy, 21; factors attenuating supervisory power, 72–74; functional value of rules in, 78–81; influence on supervision, 18–19; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; objectives of educational supervision in, 146; significance of supervision in, 20–25; as source of stress, 176–178, 221; supervisor as administrative buffer, 50–51; value of evaluation to, 249 agenda-supervisors: Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5; educational supervision by, 7 alliance, working, 256
“All or Nothing at All” game, 199–200 ameliorating stress, 184–191 amplifying effect of supervision, 4–5 androgynous approach to leadership, 224–225 antithetical demands: involving hierarchical position of supervisor, 238; need to balance as source of stress, 175; as source of stress for supervisor, 221 anxiety: caused by evaluation, 257; for learning, 125; mitigating in order to foster learning, 130; regarding change, effect of on learning, 131; stimulating in order to instill motivation, 129. See also job-related stress; stress appealing evaluation, 265 appraisal, performance, in evaluation conference, 260–261. See also evaluation apprenticeship programs, 5, 7 arbitrary exercise of authority, 67 assault on clients, 186–187 assessment: actively engaging learner in, 140; versus evaluation, 247; during individual supervisory conference, 255–256. See also evaluation assignment, work. See work assignment Association of Social Work Boards (ASWB), 18, 101, 327–328 atmosphere: for learning, providing, 120, 121–122; maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131 attenuation of supervisory power, 72–74 attitudes: changes in when becoming supervisor, 212–213; of worker, as factor in burnout, 179 audio recordings: in group supervision, 287; indirect observation through, 307–313; as information source for evaluation, 266; in use in supervision, 305 authority, supervisory: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; avoidance and abrogation of, 69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; legitimation of, 66; nonauthoritarian, 66–68; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; versus power, 59–60; problems in implementation of, 68–69; rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and, 234–235; sources of, 59; supervisee countervailing power, 74–78 autonomous supervisors, 9–10 autonomy: balancing accountability and, 329–330; factors attenuating supervisory power and authority, 72–74; group supervision as step toward, 279–280; and interminable supervision, 321, 324–325; maximizing energy for learning through, 130; professional, and licensure, 327–329; of social work profession, 21–22, 25; of supervisor, restraints on, 221; and task delegation, 37–40; threats to as source of stress, 168; value of evaluation due to, 250 availability, supervisor, 183 avoidance, of authority by supervisors, 69–72 baccalaureate supervisors, 206 bad news, communicating, 46, 47 balance, need for in evaluation, 258 behavior: changes in when becoming supervisor, 212; as focus of evaluation, 258–259 behavioral symptoms of burnout, 165 belonging, developing through group supervision, 278 “Be Nice to Me Because I Am Nice to You” game, 197 best-practice training, 339 BITE (bug-in-the-ear) technology, 313–316 blame: dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189; supervisee games involving, 201–202 boards of social work examiners, state, 17–18 Boston Associated Charities, 2 Boston Charities Organization, 5 boundary positions, social workers in, 177–178 buffer, supervisor as administrative, 49–51 bug-in-the-ear (BITE) technology, 313–316 bug-in-the-eye technology, 316 bureaucracy: interminable supervision and debureaucratization, 330–333; organizational, 27–28; and profession, balancing, 340–342 bureaucratic orientation, 196–197 burnout: caveats regarding, 191–194; general discussion, 164–166; supervisor experience of, 240–241; symptoms of, 165–166, 179; worker personality as factor in, 179–182. See also job-related stress —implementing supportive supervision: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191 calling, sense of as factor in burnout, 182 career-long supervision. See interminable supervision career planning, effect of evaluation on, 249 caring, as factor in burnout, 179–180 case distribution: assignment, 34–37; delegation, 37–40; planning, 33–34 caseload management, 35, 185 caseload size, of supervisors, 211 case material, in group supervision, 285–286 case records, as source of information, 301–304 case review, in individual supervisory conference, 104 “Casework à Trois” game, 201 challenges of practice, balancing learning between skills and, 133 change: effect of anxiety regarding on learning, 131; planned, in educational supervision, 99; in social work profession, effect on supervisor, 219; as source of stress, 167–168 change agent, supervisor as, 51–53 Charity Organization Society movement: education in, 5–7; supervision in, 1–5 child welfare services, 86
circular arrangement, in group supervision, 283 circular nature of feelings leading to burnout, 166 Civil Rights Act of 1964, 234
clarity, maximizing energy for learning through, 130 client focus, SWAI, 269 clients: assault on, 186–187; as captives of agency, 23; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 213; educational supervision outcomes, 93; feedback and outcomes in live supervision, 317–320; feedback from, using supervision to elicit, 115; as information source for evaluation, 266, 267; and noncompliance, understanding, 82, 83–84; parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155; protection of through rules, 80; sexual harassment by, 235–236; sharing of experience with in group supervision, 276–277; as source of stress, 170–173; as source of supervisory authority, 59; as source of support for supervisees, 194–195; supervisee games redefining worker as 197; supervisor as administrative buffer, 49–50; supervisor focus on, effect on learning, 143; value of evaluation to, 250 clinical approach, use in teaching, 108 clinical case material, in group supervision, 285–286 clinical-educational supervision. See educational supervision clinical practice, as preparation for becoming supervisor, 209–210 clinical supervision, 90 closure, lack of in social work, 172 code of ethics, NASW, 17, 32, 246 codes of conduct, state, 32 coercive power: general discussion, 60–61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 cognitive reframing, 241 cohesion, in group supervision, 278, 281 collaboration, with peers, 330
Columbia University School of Social Work, 7 commitment: as factor in burnout, 182; involved in effective evaluation, 235; supportive supervision focus on, 161 communication: of evaluation, 263–265; in group supervision, 281 communication function, in administrative supervision: informal communication, 48; lateral communication, 47–48; overview, 43–44; problems in, 46–47; process in, 44–46 community: accountability to, 21; attitudes toward social work, as source of stress, 178–179; authority as deriving from, 58–59; influence on supervision, 14–16 community liaison, supervisor as, 53 community workers, observation of, 300–301 competence: association with stress and burnout, 180–181; confirmation of, lack of as source of stress, 175–176; contributing to as part of supportive supervision, 182–183; influence of group supervision on assessment of, 277; maximizing energy for learning through, 132; of supervisor, effect on learning, 142 competent caring, 180
competition, in group supervision, 280 complaints, supervisor as administrative buffer from, 49–50 compliance, rigid, 75–76
compliments: in supportive supervision, 190–191; tempering criticism with, 113 conceptual teaching, 109–110
concrete-active learning orientation, 137 conferences: evaluation, 260–263; state and national, 6. See also evaluation; group supervision; individual supervisory conference confidence: maximizing energy for learning through, 132; role in communication, 47 confidentiality: in group supervision, 282; in managed care context, 337 confirmation of competence, lack of as source of stress, 175–176 continuing role obligations, in supportive supervision, 189 costs and benefits, 234 conscious learning, 136–137 consent, informed, 59, 307–308, 315
cos, 194
consent of supervisees, as forming countervailing power, 75 consideration, as aspect of supervision, 159–160, 224–225 consideration scale, Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71 consistency, of evaluation, 259 constructive feedback, in individual supervisory conference, 112–116 consultation, peer, 330
counting: element of in burnout, 166; as process related to client feelings, 170–171
countertransference, 239
context of tasks, as source of stress, 173–176 continued supervision. See interminable supervision continuity of service, 42
continuous process: evaluation as, 255; evaluation preparation as, 260
contracts, supervision, 257, 332–333
contradictory demands, as source of stress, 175 control: in group supervision, 281; professional versus bureaucratic, 340–341; in supervisory authority, 58;
of supervisory situation, supervisee games related to, 200–202. See also supervisory authority and power
control paradox, 75–76
coopition, 51
coordinating work, 42–43
coping strategies, for stress: supervisee, 180–181;
supervisor, 239–242
corrective feedback: in group supervision, 289; in individual supervisory conference, 112–116 cost-effectiveness, of group supervision, 275–276 co-therapy supervision, 305–307
countertransference, 151, 168–169
countervailing power of supervisees, 74–78 coworkers, as source of support for supervisees, 195.
See also peers
credibility, role in communication, 47 critical feedback: in group supervision, 290–291; in individual supervisory conference, 113–116. See also evaluation
cross-cultural supervision: gender factors, 224–227;
overview, 222; race and ethnicity factors, 222–223;
sexual orientation factors, 227–230
cross-gender supervisory relationships, 225–227 cultural environment of social work supervision, 16 cultural factors, educational supervision, 100. See also cross-cultural supervision cybertechnology, in observation, 320–321. See also specific technology by name danger: noncompliance resulting from, 85; reactions to in supportive supervision, 184; as source of stress, 172–173
debureaucratization, and interminable supervision, 330–333
decision-making by social workers: expectations regarding supervisor role in, 218–219; reactions to in supportive supervision, 187; as source of stress, 173
dedication, as factor in burnout, 182 defensive games. See supervisee games defiance, noncompliance resulting from, 85 deliberation, work, 37–40
demand levels, supervisee games related to manipulating, 196–197
demands: effect on learning, 131; involving hierarchical position of supervisor, 238; as source of stress for
supervisor, 221
democratic participation, supervisee games
involving, 198
demographic environment, of social work supervision, 16
demography, of social work supervision, 19–20 department, agency, influence on supervision, 18–19 dependency: legitimate needs of supervisees, 132; power as based on, 74–75; supervisee games
involving, 200–201
depersonalizing authority, 67
descriptive feedback, importance of, 116 development: evaluating workers against, 269;
evaluation based on, 270–271
developmental experiences: in educational diagnosis, 139; and noncompliance, 85
developmental supervision, 155–157
deviance, 50–51
diagnosis, educational: applying, 139–140;
individualizing learner through, 137–139
diagnostic assessment of emotional support needs, 179, 181–182
Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, 83, 336
dialectical-hypothetical teaching, 107 dialogue, individual supervisory conference as, 106
diary, supervision, 255
didactic orientation, 111, 112
didactic teaching, 107, 122–123
directives, in individual supervisory conference, 118 directivity, in work delegation, 37–40 direct observation: co-therapy supervision, 305–307;
feedback based on, 115; general discussion, 320; importance of to evaluation, 254–255; as information source for evaluation, 266; one-way mirrors, 305; overview, 304; sitting in, 305 direct service workers, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5. See also workers direct supervisory interventions. See live supervision disciplinary action, 60–61, 87–89
disclosure: in individual supervisory conference, 119– 120; of sexual orientation, 229; supervisee control of, 76–77; to supervisor, problems with, 301–304
discouragement, in supportive supervision, 162 discretion, individual: of supervisor, restraints on, 221; and supervisory power and authority, 72–74. See also authority
discussion: encouraging, 135; need for in evaluation, 262–263; in stress management, 185–186
dissolution, in supportive supervision, 162 dismay, in supportive supervision, 162 dismissal of supervisees, 89 dissatisfaction: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; stimulating in order to instill motivation, 129; of supervisor, sources of, 239
distance, from peers when becoming supervisor, 215–216 distancing techniques, 201
district committee, Charity Organization Society movement, 2
diversification, job, 185 diversity challenges in supervision. See cross-cultural supervision documentation: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; of disciplinary action, 89; supervisory, 32–33 doing-one’s-best theme, in supportive supervision, 188 downward communication, 44, 48
due diligence, when hiring, 29–30
due process, 246

EBP (evidence-based practice), 339–340, 346 ecology of social work supervision: agency system, 18; community, 14–16; overview, 14; social work profession, 16–17; state boards of social work examiners, 17–18; supervisor–supervisee dyad, 19; third-party stakeholders, 16; unit peer group, 18–19; worker–client dyad, 19 economic environment of supervision, 14–16 economy, of group supervision, 275–276 education: and professional socialization, 23–24; for social work, development of, 5–8; and staff recruitment, 29; for supervision, 344–346 educational diagnosis: applying, 139–140; individualizing learner through, 137–139 educational supervision: administrative supervision, relationship to, 93–96; case illustration, 120–125; and client outcomes, 93; content in, 96–102; definitions of, 8–9, 11–14; developmental supervision, 155–157; and evaluation, 270; good supervisor characteristics, 243–244; versus in-service training and staff development, 90–91; interminable, 325–326; in managed care context, 316; overview, 90, 160; parallel process component in, 151–155; process studies, 117–120; significance of, 91–92; as source of stress, 167–168; supervisor problems in implementation, 124–125; and supportive supervision, 161; termination of, 327; and worker outcomes, 92–93
—conditions for effective teaching and learning: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, maximizing, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
—differentiating from therapy: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148
—individual supervisory conference: ending, 116–117; helpful feedback, providing, 112–116; orientations to teaching and learning, 111–112; overview, 102; preparing, 104–105; structuring and scheduling, 102–104; teaching and learning, 105–111 educator, good supervisor as, 243–244
EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission), 233 efficacy of social work, as source of stress, 172
e-mail communication, 45–46

emergencies, individual supervisory conferences in response to, 103–104 emotional support: in group supervision, 277–278; in supportive supervision, 161–163. See also supportive supervision emotional symptoms of burnout, 165–166 emotion-focused coping, 180–181 emotions, normalization of unprofessional, 186 empathy: and contagion of client feelings, 170–171; in parallel process, 152 employment laws, 29
Encyclopedia of Social Work, 8, 9 endorsement of authority, as forming countervailing power, 75 ends, autonomy over, 342
energy for learning, maximizing, 130–132
enrichment, job, 185
EPWSI (Evaluation Process within Supervision Inventory), 269
Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), 233 equality, in educational supervision, 144 equal opportunity regulations, 246 equitable salaries, 177 ethical dilemmas: in managed care context, 337; in supervision, 342–343 ethical guidelines for social work supervision, 57 ethical obligation, evaluation as, 246–247 ethics code, NASW, 17, 32, 246 ethnicity: as content area of educational supervision, 100; factors related to in supervision, 222–223 evaluation communication and use of, 263–265; conference process, 260–263; controversial questions regarding, 269–274; definition of, 246–247; desirable procedures for, 254–260; dislike of, 251–254; objectives of, 250–251; of progress over time, 134; recordings in, 310; sources of information for, 265–267; of supervisor and supervision, 267–269; value to agency, 249; value to client, 250; value to supervisor, 250; value to worker, 248–249; of work, 40–42
"Evaluation Is Not for Friends" game, 198 Evidence-Based Practice within Supervision Inventory (EPWSI), 269
evidence-based practice (EBP), 339–340, 346
evidence-based practice (EBP), 339–340, 346 evaluative themes, in supportive supervision, 209–210; requirements for supervisor, 206–207; sharing of in group supervision, 276–277; of supervisor, effect on learning, 142
experiential-existential orientation, 111–112

Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu experiential learning patterns, 137 expertise, of supervisor: effect on learning, 142; expectations regarding, 218–219; requirements for, 206–207 expert power: general discussion, 62; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 explicit feedback, need for in evaluation, 262 explicit learning, 136–137
expressive-supportive function of supervision. See supportive supervision external control of agency policy, 21 externalization of stress, 185–186 external risks related to learning, 139
extrinsic motives, 128
extrinsic satisfaction related to becoming supervisor, 208 face-to-face communication, 45 failure: dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189; preparing learner for, 134; as source of stress, 176 fairness, need for in evaluation, 258–259 family stressors, as adding to job stress, 181 feedback: client, in live supervision, 317–320; EPWSI, 269; in evaluation conference, 260–261; in group supervision, 290–291; helpful, during individual supervisory conference, 112–116; importance of to supervision, 247; praise through positive, 133–134; rooted in direct observation, 304; from supervisees, 268–269; for supervisor, lack of, 240; systematic, 41. See also evaluation females, factors in supervision involving, 224–227 feminine characteristics, in supervision, 224–225 financial crises, effect on social work supervision, 15–16 firing supervisees, 89
flattery, supervisee games involving, 197 flexibility, maximizing energy for learning through, 130 focus, as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 145–146 formal evaluation. See evaluation formal power, 62–63
forming group for supervision, 282–283 friendly visitors, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5 functional power, 62–63
games, supervisee: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200
gatekeeper, supervisor as, 29, 37, 343 gender, as content area of educational supervision, 100 gender factors: in ongoing supervision, 225–227; sexism and social work administration, 343–344; in transition to supervision, 224–225; and workplace violence, 232–233 gender segregation, as source of stress, 178 general community, effect on social work supervision, 14–16 generalization, in individual supervisory conference, 109–110
glosses, records as, 302
goal setting, EPWSI, 269
good supervisors, 242–245
gossip, 48
graded sequence, presenting material in, 134
grapevines, 48
group, supervisee, influence on supervision, 19
group allocation of work, 35–36
host setting: as source of stress, 177–178; task delegation in, 40
human services management, 206
ideational frameworks, importance of to learning, 135–136 identification with supervisor, effect on learning, 140–141
identity, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213
harassment, sexual, 233–236
“Heading Them Off at the Pass” game, 200 health care, changes in, 15
The Health of the Human Services Workforce, 192 helpful feedback, individual supervisory conference, 112–116 heresy, 50–51
heterogeneous performance, distinguishing in evaluation, 259
heterosexism, 228–229
hierarchical position of supervisors, 4, 9–10, 178, 236–238
hiring, 28–30, 183–184
home stressors, as adding to job stress, 181 home visits, violence during, 233
homophobia, 228–229
hostile clients, as source of stress, 171–172
hostile environment sexual harassment cases, 233 hostility, noncompliance resulting from, 85
host setting: as source of stress, 177–178; task delegation in, 40
human services management, 206
humor: in group supervision, 291–292; in supportive supervision, 203–205
identification with supervisor, effect on learning, 140–141
identity, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213
interminable supervision: attitudes towards, 325–327; balancing accountability and autonomy, 329–330; and de-bureaucratization, 330–333; overview, 321–324; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329; and worker autonomy, 324–325

internalization: of controls through educational supervision, 94–95, 97; of supervisor power, 63 internal risks related to learning, 139

interpersonal process recall, 310

interpersonal relationships, effect on learning, 140–142

interpersonal skills, 100–101

interpersonal supervision, 160

interprofessional collaboration, 330

intrerracial concerns in supervision, 222–223

interrater agreement, 272

interruptions, in individual supervisory conference, 103 interventions, direct supervisory. See live supervision interviews. See individual supervisory conference intrinsic motives, 128

intrinsic satisfaction, related to becoming supervisor, 208

isomorphism, and parallel process, 152–153

"It's All So Confusing" game, 201

job, significance of to worker as factor in burnout, 180

job analysis, importance of to evaluation, 254

job diversification, 185

job enrichment, 185

job mastery, as part of supportive supervision, 182–183

job-related stress: burnout, 164–166; caveats regarding, 191–194; overview, 159–164; worker personality as factor in burnout, 179–182

—implementing supportive supervision: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191

job rotation, 185

job satisfaction: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161

Joint Commission, 16

justice, proportional, 213

knowledge: of changes in social work profession, 219; providing opportunities to use, 135; of supervisor on subject matter, 142; for use, as objective of educational supervision, 109 knowledge base, development of, 6

"Lake Wobegon Effect", 256

lateral communication, 47–48

laughter. See humor
laws, employment, 29
leadership, in group supervision, 283–284 leadership behavior, gender and, 224 Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71 leadership orientation, supervisory relationship, 63 leadership styles, 159–160
learning: effect of evaluation on, 248; evaluation focused on, 351; in group supervision, 279, 280, 294; in individual supervisory conference, 105–111; orientations to, 111–112; resistances to, 99; as source of stress, 167–168 —conditions for effective: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140 legal considerations of evaluation, 246 legal responsibility of supervisor, 32 legitimate power: general discussion, 61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
leniency bias, 256
LGBT (e.g., clients, workers, supervisors), 229 liability, vicarious, 54–57
liaison, community, supervisor as, 53 licensure: overview, 17–18; professional autonomy and, 327–329; and staff recruitment, 29 life stressors, as adding to job stress, 181 “Little Old Me” game, 201 live supervision: bug-in-the-ear technology, 313–316; bug-in-the-eye technology, 316; client feedback and outcomes in, 317–320; feedback during, 304; overview, 313; research on, 316–317 long-range objectives of supervision, 9 long-range planning, 34
low compliance observability, 73
loyalties, barriers to communication involving, 46 males: gender factors in supervision, 224–227; and workplace violence, 232 malicious obedience, 75–76
malpractice claims, 54–57 managed care revolution, 15 management: changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 212–213; participatory, 331.
See also administration management by objectives (MBO), 331 managerial styles, 159–160
managerial tasks, when becoming supervisor, 213–215 manipulating demand levels, supervisee games related to, 196–197 manualized supervision, 319
masculine characteristics, in supervision, 224–225
“Maximum Feasible Participation” game, 198
MBO (management by objectives), 331
“Mea Culpa, But Just This Once” game, 202 meaningful presentation of content, effect on learning, 135–137 means, autonomy over, 342 means to an end, supervision as, 11 men: gender factors in supervision, 224–227; and workplace violence, 232 middle-management positions of supervisors, 9–10 Milford Conference Report, 86
mindfulness training, 183
minimal use of authority, 68
minority groups, supervisees from, 222–223 mirror neurons, 152
modeling, teaching through, 107–108
modifiable aspects of performance, in evaluation, 259 monitoring: noncompliance, 85–87; supervisor attitudes toward, 70; work, 40–42 morale, dealing with in supportive supervision, 162 motivation: in educational diagnosis, 138–139; role in learning, 127–130; supportive supervision focus on, 161 motives for change to supervisor status, 207–208 multicultural competence, 100.
See also cross-cultural supervision mutuality, in individual supervisory conference, 110–111 mutual process, evaluation as, 257–258
narcissism, evaluation as threat to, 257
NASW Standards for Social Work Personnel Practices, 264
National Association of Social Workers (NASW): autonomy of workers, 324–325; best-practice training, 339; code of ethics of, 17, 32, 246; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; educational supervision and worker outcomes, 92; evaluation guidelines, 264; interminable supervision, 321–322, 323; job-related stress, 180; licensure, 17; malpractice claims, 54–55; professional autonomy and licensure, 328; sexism and social work administration, 344; success of supervision, 348; supervisor characteristics, 206, 207; supervisor preparation, 208–209, 210; supervisor self-appraisal, 267; supervisory record, 32–33; supportive supervision, 159, 164; termination of educational supervision, 327; workplace violence, 232
national conferences, 6
National Practitioner Data Bank (NPDB), 55 nature of tasks, as source of stress, 173–176 needs: in group supervision, dealing with, 288–289; learning meaningful in terms of, 128 negative feedback, reactions to, 261 negative information, communicating, 46, 47 negligence, imputed, 54–57
neurobiological explanation for parallel process, 152
neurons, mirror, 152
outcomes, client, in live supervision, 317–320 pace of learning, considering, 140
partializing learning, 134
parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155 partial praise, in supportive supervision, 190–191 participation: in learning, importance of, 134–135; of worker in evaluation, 257–258 participatory management, 331 Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010, 338–339 patterns of relationship, in group supervision, 289 pay, as source of stress, 177
peer consultation, 330
peer group supervision, 329–330 peers: changed relationships with when becoming supervisor, 215–216; collaboration with, 330; evaluation by, 270; as information source for evaluation, 266; as source of support for supervisees, 195; as source of support for supervisors, 240. See also group supervision people, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97 performance: appraisal and feedback in evaluation conference, 260–261; as focus of educational supervision, 145; monitoring, 40–42; review of for individual supervisory conference, 104–105; rewards for, 60; stimulating dissatisfaction in order to instill motivation, 129; supervisee games related to deficiency in, 201–202; supportive supervision as focused on, 160–161; work, as focus of evaluation, 258. See also evaluation; observation of performance persistent use of authority, 68 personal face-to-face communication, 45 personal identity, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213 personality: supervisor, as source of stress for supervisor, 221; worker, as factor in burnout, 179–182 Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, 15 personal self, in therapy versus educational supervision, 145, 148–151 personnel, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97–100 perspective, supervisor, in supportive supervision, 189–190 phone communication, 45
physical arrangement, in group supervision, 283 physical danger, as source of stress, 172–173. See also danger newcomers, in group supervision, 280–281

New York Charity Organization Society, 7
New York School of Philanthropy, 7
nonacceptance, effect on learning, 131 nonauthoritarian authority, 66–68 noncompliance: disciplinary action, 87–89; monitoring, 85–87; understanding, 81–85 non-zero-sum rewards, 60
normalization: in group supervision, 277; of unprofessional feelings, 186 norms, in group supervision, 287–288 NPDB (National Practitioner Data Bank), 55 obedience, malicious, 75–76 objectives: clarifying in supportive supervision, 190; consensus regarding, in evaluation, 259–260; of evaluation, 250–251; group supervision, 283–285; management by, 331; maximizing energy for learning through, 130; poorly defined, as source of stress, 174–175; of therapy versus educational supervision, 146 obligations, use of rules to create, 80 observation of performance: general discussion, 320–321; importance of to evaluation, 254–255; nature of problem, 300–304; via recordings, 307–313
—direct: co-therapy supervision, 305–307; as information source for evaluation, 266; one-way mirrors, 305; overview, 304; sitting in, 305 Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, 231 occupational stress. See job-related stress off-the-cuff individual supervisory conferences, 103–104
Ohio State Leadership Studies, 159–160
Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, 14
one-way mirrors, direct observation through, 305
on-the-job experience, as supervisor training, 345 on-the-spot individual supervisory conferences, 103–104 open confrontation, countering supervisee games with, 202–203
operational feedback, importance of, 116 OQ-45 self-report, 319
oral communication, 45
oral evaluation, 262–264 organization, as source of stress, 176–178. See also administration; agency system organizational bureaucracy, 27–28. See also bureaucracy organizational communication: informal, 48; lateral, 47–48; overview, 43–44; problems in, 46–47; process in, 44–46
organizational controls, need for in supervision, 25 organizational factors attenuating supervisory power, 72–74 physical symptoms of burnout, 165 place, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97 placing workers, 30–32
planned change, in educational supervision, 99 planning: agenda, encouraging worker participation in, 134–135; for group supervision, 284–285; teaching, 136; work, 33–34
"Pleading Fragility" game, 200 pleasure, and motivation for learning, 133 policy: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 50–51; change agent, supervisor as, 51–52; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 213; disciplinary action, 87–89; external control of agency, 21; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85 political environment of social work supervision, 14–16 positional power: general discussion, 61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 positive feedback: praise through, 133–134; reactions to, 261 positive relationship, importance of to evaluation, 256 postgraduate education, 8 power, supervisee games related to reducing disparity of, 198–200 power, supervisory: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; versus authority, 59–60; avoidance and abrogation of, 69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; interrelationships among types of, 62–66; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; problems in implementation of, overview, 68–69; rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and, 234–235; sources of, 59–62; supervisee countervailing power, 74–75 pragmatic rewards of noncompliance, 84–85 praise: in successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; supervisee games involving, 197; in supportive supervision, 133–134; supervision, 190–191; tempering criticism with, 113; evaluation conference, 257, 260, 261–262; for group supervision, 284–285; individual supervisory conference, 104–105; of learner for failure, 134 prevention of stress, 183–184
primary socialization, 168 privacy, and disciplinary action, 88
private sector values, in social work profession, 17
private third parties, 16 problem-focused coping, 180–181 problems, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97, 101 process, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97 process recordings, use in supervision, 305 process studies, educational supervision, 117–120 profession, social work as: and bureaucracy, balancing, 340–342; changes in practice of, 218; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; emergence of, 6–8; and expert power, 65; influence on supervision, 16–17; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329 professional accomplishments, praising, 133 professional autonomy, and licensure, 327–329 professional development: evaluation based on, 270–271; in therapy versus in educational supervision, 145–148, 150–151 professional orientation, 196–197 professional socialization, 23–24 progress over time, evaluating, 134 promotion to supervisor positions, 207–208
proportional justice, 213
"Protect the Sick and the Infirm" game, 197–198
psychic punishments, 60 psychic rewards: from clients, and noncompliance, 84; general discussion, 60; given to supervisor by supervisee, 77; related to learning, 128 psychological considerations, in noncompliance, 85 psychological contract, between supervisor and supervisee, 257 psychological well-being, supportive supervision focus on, 178–179 public attitudes toward social work, as source of stress, 178–179 public third parties, 16 punishment: by clients, and noncompliance, 84; by supervisor, 60–61, 87–89 punitive actions, 60–61, 87–89 purpose, as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 145–146 reality factors, in supervision, 222–223
race factors, in supervision, 222–223
rapport, SWAI, 269
readiness for learning, 127–130
Reagan revolution, 14
realism: need for in supportive supervision, 192; vocabularies of, 187–188, 241
reality factors, taking into account in evaluation, 258
reality shock, when becoming supervisor, 211–212
recapitulation, in individual supervisory conference, 116
receptivity for learning, 127–130
reciprocal feedback, 268
recognition, as source of job satisfaction, 129
quota pro quo sexual harassment cases, 233
race factors, in supervision, 222–223
rapport, SWAI, 269
readiness for learning, 127–130
realism, 14
realism: need for in supportive supervision, 192; vocabularies of, 187–188, 241
reality factors, taking into account in evaluation, 258
reality shock, when becoming supervisor, 211–212
recapitulation, in individual supervisory conference, 116
receptivity for learning, 127–130
reciprocal feedback, 268
recognition, as source of job satisfaction, 129
recognition of limitations theme, in supportive supervision, 188
recordings: in group supervision, 287; as information source for evaluation, 266; observation of performance through, 307–313; use in supervision, 305 records: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; as information source for evaluation, 265–266; as source of information, problems with, 301–304; supervisory, 32–33, 255; use in supervision, 305
recruitment, staff, 28–30, 183–184
references: general discussion, 61–62; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
reflection process component in educational supervision, 151–155
regulatory trend in social work, 17–18
relationship: with client, as source of stress, 170–173; in group supervision, dealing with, 289; peer, changes in when becoming supervisor, 215–216—supervisory: cross-gender, 225–227; importance in educational supervision, 140–142; influence on supervision, 19; over time, significance of versus cultural factors, 230; overview, 11; positive, importance of to evaluation, 256; sexual harassment in, 234–235; as source of stress, 168–170; supervisee games redefining, 197–198
remote controls, rules as, 80
repetition, imaginative, 136
reports: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; supervisory, 32–33; of workplace violence, 232
reprimands, 87–89
resistant clients, as source of stress, 171–172
resource allocation, accountability for, 21
resources, assuring access to, 43
responsibility: changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–211; promoting in supportive supervision, 190; sharing in supportive supervision, 187; as source of job satisfaction, 129; supervisee games involving, 201–202
reviewing work, 40–42
rewarding learning, importance of, 133–134
reward power: general discussion, 60; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
rigid compliance, 75–76
rigidity, agency, 51
risks, related to learning, 139
rivalry, in group supervision, 280
role adoption, 345
role inductions, 257
role modeling, 107
role obligations, conflicting, in supportive supervision, 189
role performance invisibility, 73
role playing, in group supervision, 286–287
role relationships: as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 146–148; supervisor discomfort with in educational supervision, 144
rotation, job, 185
routinized rewards, 60
rules: in countervailing power of supervisees, 78; disciplinary action, 87–89; functional value of, 78–81; in group supervision, 287–288; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85; for recording, 307–308
rumors, 48
ruptures, in supervisory relationship, 141
safety: concerns about as source of stress, 172–173; maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131; and noncompliance, 85; reactions to concerns in supportive supervision, 184—workplace, as problem for supervision: overview, 230–231; sexual harassment, 233–236; violence, 231–233
salary, as source of stress, 177
sandwich approach to evaluation interview, 262
satisfaction, job: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161 scheduling: evaluation conference, 260; group supervision, 283; individual supervisory conference, 102–104; in work assignment, 35
schools of social work, 7–8
screening, pre-employment, 29–30 secure atmosphere, maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131. See also safety Seducing for Subversion” game, 196–197
self-awareness, as content area of educational supervision, 98–100
self-awkwardness, 309
self-determination, as not applicable to supervisee role, 214
self-disclosure, of sexual orientation, 229
self-discovery learning, 107
self-esteem, evaluation as threat to, 257
self-evaluation: encouraging, 121; in evaluation conference, 262–263; influence of group supervision on, 277; by supervisor, 267; value of to worker, 248–249
self-image of worker, as factor in burnout, 179–180
self-initiated learning, 107
self-observation, through recordings, 308–310
self-perception, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213 See also
recognition of limitations theme, in supportive supervision, 188
recordings: in group supervision, 287; as information source for evaluation, 266; observation of performance through, 307–313; use in supervision, 305
records: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; as information source for evaluation, 265–266; as source of information, problems with, 301–304; supervisory, 32–33, 255; use in supervision, 305
recruitment, staff, 28–30, 183–184
references: general discussion, 61–62; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
reflection process component in educational supervision, 151–155
regulatory trend in social work, 17–18
relationship: with client, as source of stress, 170–173; in group supervision, dealing with, 289; peer, changes in when becoming supervisor, 215–216—supervisory: cross-gender, 225–227; importance in educational supervision, 140–142; influence on supervision, 19; over time, significance of versus cultural factors, 230; overview, 11; positive, importance of to evaluation, 256; sexual harassment in, 234–235; as source of stress, 168–170; supervisee games redefining, 197–198
remote controls, rules as, 80
repetition, imaginative, 136
reports: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; supervisory, 32–33; of workplace violence, 232
reprimands, 87–89
resistant clients, as source of stress, 171–172
resource allocation, accountability for, 21
resources, assuring access to, 43
responsibility: changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–211; promoting in supportive supervision, 190; sharing in supportive supervision, 187; as source of job satisfaction, 129; supervisee games involving, 201–202
reviewing work, 40–42
rewarding learning, importance of, 133–134
reward power: general discussion, 60; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
rigid compliance, 75–76
rigidity, agency, 51
risks, related to learning, 139
rivalry, in group supervision, 280
role adoption, 345
role inductions, 257
role modeling, 107
role obligations, conflicting, in supportive supervision, 189
role performance invisibility, 73
role playing, in group supervision, 286–287
role relationships: as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 146–148; supervisor discomfort with in educational supervision, 144
rotation, job, 185
routinized rewards, 60
rules: in countervailing power of supervisees, 78; disciplinary action, 87–89; functional value of, 78–81; in group supervision, 287–288; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85; for recording, 307–308
rumors, 48
ruptures, in supervisory relationship, 141
safety: concerns about as source of stress, 172–173; maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131; and noncompliance, 85; reactions to concerns in supportive supervision, 184—workplace, as problem for supervision: overview, 230–231; sexual harassment, 233–236; violence, 231–233
salary, as source of stress, 177
sandwich approach to evaluation interview, 262
satisfaction, job: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161
scheduling: evaluation conference, 260; group supervision, 283; individual supervisory conference, 102–104; in work assignment, 35
schools of social work, 7–8
screening, pre-employment, 29–30
secure atmosphere, maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131. See also safety “Seducing for Subversion” game, 196–197
selective identification, in educational diagnosis, 139 selective teaching, 136
selectivity, in communication, 47
self-awareness, as content area of educational supervision, 98–100
self-awkwardness, 309
self-determination, as not applicable to supervisee role, 214
self-disclosure, of sexual orientation, 229
self-discovery learning, 107
self-esteem, evaluation as threat to, 257
self-evaluation: encouraging, 121; in evaluation conference, 262–263; influence of group supervision on, 277; by supervisor, 267; value of to worker, 248–249
self-image of worker, as factor in burnout, 179–180
self-initiated learning, 107
self-observation, through recordings, 308–310
self-perception, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213
INDEX

self-protection, barriers to communication involving, 46 self-reinforcing process, burnout as, 166 self-reports, as source of information, 301–304 self-statements, modifying in supportive supervision, 189 sequence, presenting material in graded, 134 service, continuity of, 42
service aspirations of social work practice, 11 sexism: and social work administration, 343–344; as source of stress, 178 sexual harassment, 233–236 sexual orientation: as content area of educational supervision, 100; as factor in supervision, 227–230 shared process, evaluation as, 257–258 sharing: in group supervision, 276–277; responsibility, in supportive supervision, 187 short-range objectives of supervision, 9 sitting in, direct observation through, 305
situational learning, 109
skills, balancing learning between challenges of practice and, 133
snoopervision, 41
social distance from peers, in supervisor role, 215–216 socialization: professional, 23–24; through educational supervision, 94–95, 97, 168 social problems, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97 social relationship, games redefining supervisory relationship as, 198 social support networks, 195–196 social work administration. See administration social work education, development of, 5–8 social work examiners, state boards of, 17–18 social work profession: and bureaucracy, balancing, 340–342; changes in practice of, 218; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; emergence of, 6–8; and expert power, 65; influence on supervision, 16–17; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329 social work supervision. See specific types of supervision; supervision solidarity, developing through group supervision, 278 somatic symptoms of stress, 180–181
“So What Do You Know About It?” game, 199 specialized education, emergence of, 6–8 specific feedback, 116, 262 specific nature of evaluation, 259 specific praise, 133
staff development: versus educational supervision, 90–91; evaluation focused on, 250–251
staff recruitment and selection, 28–30, 183–184 standards: disciplinary action, 87–89; evaluating workers against, 269, 271–272; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85 Standards for Social Work Practice in Child Protection, 159 state boards of social work examiners, 17–18
state codes of conduct, 32
state conferences, 6
states, supervisor education requirements for, 346 stimulating motivation, 129–130 structure: as associated with masculine characteristics, 224–225; maximizing energy for learning through, 130 structure scale, Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71 structuring individual supervisory conference, 102–104 successful learning, importance of, 133–134 success of social work, as source of stress, 172
summarization, in individual supervisory conference, 116 “Superannuated Man,” 215
supervisee-centered orientation, 111–112 supervisee games: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200 supervisee group, influence on supervision, 19 supervisees. See workers supervision: definition of, 8, 11; demography of, 19–20; development of education for social work, 5–8; education for, 344–346; empirical validation of definition, 11–14; evaluation of, 267–269; explaining to workers, 32–33; functions of, 8–9; hierarchical position of supervisors, 9–10; historical development of, 1–5; as indirect service, 10; as interactional process, 10–11; as means to an end, 11; objectives of, 9; positive values of, 346–349; significance of, 19–20. See also specific types of supervision—ecology of: agency system, 18; community, 14–16; overview, 14; social work profession, 16–17; state boards of social work examiners, 17–18; supervisor–supervisee dyad, 19; third-party stakeholders, 16; unit peer group, 18–19; worker–client dyad, 19
Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu
—interminable: attitudes towards, 325–327; balancing accountability and autonomy, 329–330; and deprofessionalization, 330–333; overview, 321–324; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329; and worker autonomy, 324–325 supervisors: acceptance of supervisee evaluation of, 259; as administrative buffer, 49–51; advocate role of, 48–49; avoidance and abrogation of authority by, 69–72; as change agent and community liaison, 51–53; changes in social work practice, 218; communication function of, 43–48; coping with stress by, 239–242;countering supervisee games, 202–203; dislike of evaluation by, 251–254; dissatisfaction in supervision, sources of, 239; evaluation conference preparation by, 260; evaluation of, 267–269; factors involved in work delegation by, 39–40;as gatekeepers, 29, 37; good, 242–245; hierarchical position of, 9–10; involvement in supervisee games, 197–202; legal responsibility of, 32; observation of workers in group setting, 278; preparation for group supervision, 284–285; problems in implementation of educational supervision, 142–144; recordings of, 311–312; role in group supervision, 287–291; sexism, 344; time spent in different roles, 217; validity of evaluations by, 271–272; value of evaluation to, 250. See also specific types of supervision; supervisory authority and power; teaching texting, communication through, 45–46 theoretical bias, in evaluation, 272–273 theoretical orientation: presenting content within, 135–136; use in teaching, 108 therapy, differentiating educational supervision from: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148 therapies, in supervisee games, 197–198 third-party stakeholders, influence on supervision, 16 time: involved in effective evaluation, 255; role in individual supervisory conference, 103 time limited supervision, 327
timeouts, to reduce stress, 184
top-down work assignment, 35–36
total quality management (TQM), 332 training: Charity Organization Society programs, 5–6; evidence-based, 339–340; in-service, versus educational supervision, 90–91; in supervision, 208–210, 344–346. See also educational supervision transference, 139, 147, 168–169 transference to supervisor position. See stress, associated with becoming supervisor “Treat Me, Don’t Beat Me” game, 197–198
trust, role in communication, 47 turnover, in social work profession, 192–193
“Two Against the Agency” game, 196–197 uncertainty: reducing in supportive supervision, 190; as source of stress, 174–175; in supervisor role, 218–219 undue influence situations, 234–235 unfamiliar, moving from familiar to, 132 uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
unit peer group, influence on supervision, 18–19
unit work plan, 33–34
universalization, in group supervision, 277 University of Michigan School of Social Work, 292 unprofessional behavior, in supportive supervision, 186–187 unprofessional feelings, normalization of, 186 unscheduled individual supervisory conferences, 103–104 upward communication, 44, 48
usefulness of content, explaining, 127–128 values, in social work profession, 16–17 variety in job assignments, importance of, 34 verbal abuse, as source of stress, 173 vertical communication, 43–47
vicarious liability, 54–57 victim status: of clients, and noncompliance, 83; supervisee claims to, 78 video recordings: in group supervision, 287; indirect observation through, 307–313; as information source for evaluation, 266; use in supervision, 305 violence: reactions to in supportive supervision, 184; as source of stress, 172–173; in workplace, as problem for supervision, 231–233 visitors, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5 vocabularies of realism, 187–188, 241 volunteers, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5 wages, as source of stress, 177 welfare reform, 14–15
well-being, supportive supervision focus on, 162–163
“What You Don’t Know Won’t Hurt Me” game, 201
white supervisors, 222–223
“Who Me? Not Me” game, 201–202
Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services, 11–12 withdrawal, emotional, as symptom of burnout, 166 withholding information from supervisor, 46, 301–304 “Woe Is Me” game, 200
women, factors in supervision involving, 224–227 work: coordinating, 42–43; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating, 40–42; nature and context of as source of stress, 173–176; performance as focus of evaluation, 258; as source of job satisfaction, 129 work assignment: criteria for, 34–35; overview, 34; problems in, 36–37; procedures for, 35–36 work clique, as source of support for worker, 195 work delegation, 37–40
worker–client dyad, influence on supervision, 19 workers: adaptations by as source of support for, 196; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; attitudes towards evaluation, 253–254; attributes involved in work delegation by, 39–40; autonomy of and interminable supervision, 324–325; changes in thinking about when becoming supervisor, 214–215; communication with, 43–48; as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97–100; countervailing power of, 74–78; educational supervision outcomes, 92–93; evaluation conference preparation by, 261–262; evaluation focused on, 250–251; gender factors in ongoing supervision, 225–227; group membership responsibilities, 290–291; importance of educational supervision to, 92; inducting and placing, 30–32; inducting in group supervision, 287; influence on supervision, 19; interrelationships among types of supervisory power, 62–66; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating, 40–42; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85; observation of supervisor in group setting, 279; parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155; personality as factor in burnout, 179–182; protection of through rules, 80; reading of written evaluation by, 264–265; recruitment and selection of, 28–30, 183–184; referent power, 61–62; relationship of educational to administrative supervision, 94–95; role of in supervisory relationship, 244; self-evaluation by, 248–249, 262–263; as source of stress for supervisor, 220–221; as source of support for supervisors, 240; sources of support for, 194–196; supervisor as administrative buffer, 49–51; supervisor attempts to cope with stress, 241; supervisor evaluation by, 267–269; value of evaluation to, 248–249; vicarious liability, 54–57; work coordination for, 42–43. See also evaluation; individual supervisory conference; job-related stress; learning; observation of performance

Workforce study, NASW: autonomy of workers, 324–325; best-practice training, 339; interminable supervision, 321–322, 323; job-related stress, 180; professional autonomy and licensure, 328; sexism and social work administration, 348; success of supervision, 348; supervisor characteristics, 206, 207; supervisor preparation, 208–209, 210; supervisor self-appraisal, 267; supportive supervision, 164; workplace violence, 232

workgroups, new employee induction into, 31
working alliance, 256
working relationships, supervision of, 43. See also relationships workplace violence, 231–233
work planning, 33–34
work setting, as source of stress, 176–178 workshops, stress management, 185 work stress. See job-related stress written communication, 45–46
written evaluation, 264–265 written records, as information source for evaluation, 265–266. See also records

“Yes-butting” game, 202

zero-sum rewards, 60

Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu