INDEX

abrogation of authority by supervisors, 69–72
absenteeism, 41–42
abuse, as source of stress, 173
acceptance, atmosphere of, 130–131 accountability: versus autonomy, 341–342; balancing autonomy and, 329–330 achievement: promoting in supportive supervision, 190; as source of job satisfaction, 129 active involvement, in learning, 134–135 actively engaging learner in assessment, 140 adaptations, supervisee, as source of support, 196 administration: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; change agent, supervisor as, 51–52; conflicts between profession and bureaucracy, 340–342; influence on task delegation, 40; interminable supervision and debureaucratization, 330–333; practices enhancing supervisory authority, 68; role of, 10; sexism and, 343–344; supervisor evaluation by, 269; working with, problems related to, 236–238. See also supervisory authority and power administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51 administrative objectives of evaluation, 250 administrative supervision: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; change agent, supervisor as, 51–53; communication function, 43–48; continued, 326; coordinating work, 42–43; definitions of, 8–9, 11–14; educational supervision and, 93–96; and evaluation, 270–271; explaining supervision, 32–33; good supervisor characteristics, 243; inducting and placing workers, 30–32; in managed care context, 335–336; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating work, 40–42; organizational bureaucracy, 27–28; overview, 160; as source of stress, 167; staff recruitment and selection, 28–30; and supportive supervision, 161; value of evaluation to, 249; work assignment, 34–37; work delegation, 37–40; work planning, 33–34 —problems in implementation: disciplinary action, 87–89; noncompliance, 81–87; rules, functional value of, 78–81; vicarious liability, 54–57. See also supervisory authority and power administrator, good supervisor as, 243. See also administration adult learning. See learning advancement, as source of job satisfaction, 129 advocate role of supervisor, 48–49
Affordable Care Act of 2010, 338–339
African American supervisees, 222–223 agency system: accountability to community, 21; administrative and educational supervision in, 94; change agent, supervisor as, 51; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 212–213; evaluation use in, 263–264; and expert power, 65–66; external control of policy, 21; factors attenuating supervisory power, 72–74; functional value of rules in, 78–81; influence on supervision, 18–19; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; objectives of educational supervision in, 146; significance of supervision in, 20–25; as source of stress, 176–178, 221; supervisor as administrative buffer, 50–51; value of evaluation to, 249 agenda-supervisors: Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5; educational supervision by, 7 alliance, working, 256 “All or Nothing at All” game, 199–200 ameliorating stress, 184–191 amplifying effect of supervision, 4–5 androgynous approach to leadership, 224–225 antithetical demands: involving hierarchical position of supervisor, 238; need to balance as source of stress, 175; as source of stress for supervisor, 221 anxiety: caused by evaluation, 257; for learning, 125; mitigating in order to foster learning, 130; regarding change, effect of on learning, 131; stimulating in order to instill motivation, 129. See also job-related stress; stress appealing evaluation, 265 appraisal, performance, in evaluation conference, 260–261. See also evaluation apprenticeship programs, 5, 7 arbitrary exercise of authority, 67 assault on clients, 186–187 assessment: actively engaging learner in, 140; versus evaluation, 247; during individual supervisory conference, 255–256. See also evaluation assignment, work. See work assignment Association of Social Work Boards (ASWB), 18, 101, 327–328 atmosphere: for learning, providing, 120, 121–122; maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131 attenuation of supervisory power, 72–74 attitudes: changes in when becoming supervisor, 212–213; of worker, as factor in burnout, 179 audio recordings: in group supervision, 287; indirect observation through, 307–317; as information source for evaluation, 266; use in supervision, 305 authority, supervisory: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; avoidance and abrogation of, 69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; legitimation of, 66; nonauthoritarian, 66–68; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; versus power, 59–60; problems in implementation of, overview, 68–69; rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and, 234–235; sources of, 59; supervisee countervailing power, 74–78 autonomous supervisors, 9–10 autonomy: balancing accountability and, 329–330; factors attenuating supervisory power and authority, 72–74; group supervision as step toward, 279–280; and interminable supervision, 321, 324–325; maximizing energy for learning through, 130; professional, and licensure, 327–329; of social work profession, 21–22, 25; of supervisor, restraints on, 221; and task delegation, 37–40; threats to as source of stress, 168; value of evaluation due to, 250 availability, supervisor, 183 avoidance, of authority by supervisors, 69–72 baccalaureate supervisors, 206 bad news, communicating, 46, 47 balance, need for in evaluation, 258 behavior: changes in when becoming supervisor, 212; as focus of evaluation, 258–259 behavioral symptoms of burnout, 165 belonging, developing through group supervision, 278 “Be Nice to Me Because I Am Nice to You” game, 197 best-practice training, 339 BITE (bug-in-the-ear) technology, 313–316 blame: dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189; supervisee games involving, 201–202 boards of social work examiners, state, 17–18 Boston Associated Charities, 5 Boston Charities Organization, 5 boundary positions, social workers in, 177–178 buffer, supervisor as administrative, 49–51 bug-in-the-ear (BITE) technology, 313–316 bug-in-the-eye technology, 316 bureaucracy: interminable supervision and debureaucratization, 330–333; organizational, 27–28; and profession, balancing, 340–342 bureaucratic orientation, 196–197 burnout: caveats regarding, 191–194; general discussion, 164–166; supervisor experience of, 240–241; symptoms of, 165–166, 179; worker personality as factor in, 179–182. See also job-related stress —implementing supportive supervision: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191 calling, sense of as factor in burnout, 182 career-long supervision. See interminable supervision career planning, effect of evaluation on, 249 caring, as factor in burnout, 179–180 case distribution: assignment, 34–37; delegation, 37–40; planning, 33–34 caseload management, 35, 185 caseload size, of supervisors, 211 case material, in group supervision, 285–286 case records, as source of information, 301–304 case review, in individual supervisory conference, 104 “Casework à Trois” game, 201 challenges of practice, balancing learning between skills and, 133 change: effect of anxiety regarding on learning, 131; planned, in educational supervision, 99; in social work profession, effect on supervisor, 219; as source of stress, 167–168 change agent, supervisor as, 51–53 Charity Organization Society movement: education in, 5–7; supervision in, 1–5 child welfare services, 86

circular arrangement, in group supervision, 283
circular nature of feelings leading to burnout, 166 Civil Rights Act of 1964, 234
clarity, maximizing energy for learning through, 130 client focus, SWAI, 269 clients: assault on, 186–187; as captives of agency, 23; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 213; educational supervision outcomes, 93; feedback and outcomes in live supervision, 317–320; feedback from, using supervision to elicit, 115; as information source for evaluation, 266, 267; and noncompliance, understanding, 82, 83–84; parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155; protection of through rules, 80; sexual harassment by, 235–236; sharing of experience with in group supervision, 276–277; as source of stress, 170–173; as source of supervisory authority, 59; as source of support for supervisees, 194–195; supervisee games redefining worker as, 197; supervisor as administrative buffer, 49–50; supervisor focus on, effect on learning, 143; value of evaluation to, 250 clinical approach, use in teaching, 108 clinical case material, in group supervision, 285–286 clinical-educational supervision. See educational supervision clinical practice, as preparation for becoming supervisor, 209–210 clinical supervision, 90
closure, lack of in social work, 172
code of ethics, NASW, 17, 32, 246
codes of conduct, state, 32 coercive power: general discussion, 60–61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 cognitive reframing, 241
cohesion, in group supervision, 278, 281 collaboration, with peers, 330
Columbia University School of Social Work, 7 commitment: as factor in burnout, 182; involved in effective evaluation, 235; supportive supervision focus on, 161 communication: of evaluation, 263–265; in group supervision, 281 communication function, in administrative supervision: informal communication, 48; lateral communication, 47–48; overview, 43–44; problems in, 46–47; process in, 44–46 community: accountability to, 21; attitudes toward social work, as source of stress, 178–179; authority as deriving from, 58–59; influence on supervision, 14–16 community liaison, supervisor as, 53 community workers, observation of, 300–301 competence: association with stress and burnout, 180–181; confirmation of, lack of as source of stress, 175–176; contributing to as part of supportive supervision, 182–183; influence of group supervision on assessment of, 277; maximizing energy for learning through, 132; of supervisor, effect on learning, 142 competent caring, 180
competition, in group supervision, 280 complaints, supervisor as administrative buffer from, 49–50 compliance, rigid, 75–76
compliments: in supportive supervision, 190–191; tempering criticism with, 113 conceptual teaching, 109–110
concrete-active learning orientation, 137
corporate conflict, 22 conference: evaluation, 260–263; state and national, 6. See also evaluation; group supervision; individual supervisory conference confidence: maximizing energy for learning through, 132; role in communication, 47 confidentiality: in group supervision, 282; in managed care context, 337 confirmation of competence, lack of as source of stress, 175–176 conflicting role obligations, in supportive supervision, 189 conflict resolution, 43
conformity, in group supervision, 281 confrontation, countering supervisee games with, 202–203 conscious learning, 136–137 consent, informed, 59, 307–308, 315 consent of supervisees, as forming countervailing power, 75 consideration, as aspect of supervision, 159–160, 224–225 consideration scale, Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71 consistency, of evaluation, 259 constructive feedback, in individual supervisory conference, 112–116 consultation, peer, 330
contagion: element of in burnout, 166; as process related to client feelings, 170–171 context of tasks, as source of stress, 173–176 continued supervision. See interminable supervision

continuous process: evaluation as, 255; evaluation

preparation as, 260

contracts, supervision, 257, 332–333

contradictory demands, as source of stress, 175 control: in group supervision, 281; professional versus bureaucratic, 340–341; in supervisory authority, 58;

of supervisory situation, supervisee games related to, 200–202. See also supervisory authority and power

control paradox, 75–76

copioton, 51

coordinating work, 42–43

coping strategies, for stress: supervisee, 180–181;

supervisor, 239–242

corrective feedback: in group supervision, 289; in individual supervisory conference, 112–116

cost-effectiveness, of group supervision, 275–276

countertransference, 151, 168–169

countervailing power of supervisees, 74–78

coworkers, as source of support for supervisees, 195.

See also peers

credibility, role in communication, 47

critical feedback: in group supervision, 290–291; in individual supervisory conference, 113–116. See also evaluation

cross-cultural supervision: gender factors, 224–227;

overview, 222; race and ethnicity factors, 222–223;

sexual orientation factors, 227–230

cross-gender supervisory relationships, 225–227

cultural environment of social work supervision, 16 cultural factors, educational supervision, 100. See also cross-cultural supervision cybertechnology, in observation, 320–321. See also specific technology by name danger: noncompliance resulting from, 85; reactions to

in supportive supervision, 184; as source of stress, 172–173

defbureaucratization, and interminable supervision, 330–333

decision-making by social workers: expectations

regarding supervisor role in, 218–219; reactions to

in supportive supervision, 187; as source of stress, 173

dedication, as factor in burnout, 182 defensive games. See supervisee games defiance, noncompliance resulting from, 85
delgation, work, 37–40
demand levels, supervisee games related to

manipulating, 196–197
demands: effect on learning, 131; involving hierarchical position of supervisor, 238; as source of stress for

supervisor, 221
democratic participation, supervisee games

involving, 198
demographic environment, of social work

supervision, 16
demography, of social work supervision, 19–20 department, agency, influence on supervision, 18–19 dependency: legitimate needs of supervisees, 132;

power as based on, 74–75; supervisee games

involving, 200–201
depersonalizing authority, 67
descriptive feedback, importance of, 116 development: evaluating workers against, 269;

evaluation based on, 270–271
developmental experiences: in educational diagnosis,

139; and noncompliance, 85
developmental supervision, 155–157
deviance, 50–51
diagnosis, educational: applying, 139–140;

individualizing learner through, 137–139
diagnostic assessment of emotional support needs, 179,

181–182

Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders,

83, 336
dialectical-hypothetical teaching, 107 dialogue, individual supervisory conference as, 106
diary, supervision, 255
didactic orientation, 111, 112
didactic teaching, 107, 122–123
directives, in individual supervisory conference, 118 directivity, in work delegation, 37–40
direct observation: co-therapy supervision, 305–307;

feedback based on, 115; general discussion,

320; importance of to evaluation, 254–255; as

information source for evaluation, 266; one-way

mirrors, 305; overview, 304; sitting in, 305
direct service workers, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5.

See also

workers
direct supervisory interventions. See live supervision disciplinary action, 60–61, 87–89
disclosure: in individual supervisory conference, 119–

120; of sexual orientation, 229; supervisee control of, 76–77; to supervisor, problems with, 301–304

discouragement, in supportive supervision, 162 discretion, individual: of supervisor, restraints on, 221;

and supervisory power and authority, 72–74. See also autonomy

discussion: encouraging, 135; need for in evaluation,

262–265; in stress management, 185–186
dischelosis, in supportive supervision, 162 dismay, in supportive supervision, 162 dismissal of supervisees, 89
dissatisfaction: aspects of supervision affecting, 160;

stimulating in order to instill motivation, 129; of supervisor, sources of, 239

distance, from peers when becoming supervisor,

215–216
distancing techniques, 201
district committee, Charity Organization Society

movement, 2
diversification, job, 185 diversity challenges in supervision. See cross-cultural supervision documentation: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; of disciplinary action, 89; supervisory, 32–33 doing-one’s-best theme, in supportive supervision, 188 downward communication, 44, 48
due diligence, when hiring, 29–30
due process, 246

EBP (evidence-based practice), 339–340, 346 ecoLOGY of social work supervision: agency system, 18; community, 14–16; overview, 14; social work profession, 16–17; state boards of social work examiners, 17–18; supervisor–supervisee dyad, 19; third-party stakeholders, 16; unit peer group, 18–19; worker–client dyad, 19 economic environment of supervision, 14–16 economy, of group supervision, 275–276 education: and professional socialization, 23–24; for social work, development of, 5–8; and staff recruitment, 29; for supervision, 344–346 educational diagnosis: applying, 139–140; individualizing learner through, 137–139 educational supervision: administrative supervision, relationship to, 93–96; case illustration, 120–125; and client outcomes, 93; content in, 96–102; definitions of, 8–9, 11–14; developmental supervision, 155–157; and evaluation, 270; good supervisor characteristics, 243–244; versus in-service training and staff development, 90–91; interminable, 325–326; in managed care context, 316; overview, 90, 160; parallel process component in, 151–155; process studies, 117–120; significance of, 91–92; as source of stress, 167–168; supervisor problems in implementation, 142–144; supervisory relationship, significance of, 140–143; and supportive supervision, 161; termination of, 327; and worker outcomes, 92–93
—conditions for effective teaching and learning: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, maximizing, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
—differentiating from therapy: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148
—individual supervisory conference: ending, 116–117; helpful feedback, providing, 112–116; orientations to teaching and learning, 111–112; overview, 102; preparing, 104–105; structuring and scheduling, 102–104; teaching and learning, 105–111
educator, good supervisor as, 243–244
EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission), 233 efficacy of social work, as source of stress, 172
e-mail communication, 45–46

emergencies, individual supervisory conferences in response to, 103–104 emotional support: in group supervision, 277–278; in supportive supervision, 161–163. See also supportive supervision emotional symptoms of burnout, 165–166 emotion-focused coping, 180–181
emotions, normalization of unprofessional, 186 empathy: and contagion of client feelings, 170–171; in parallel process, 152 employment laws, 29
Encyclopedia of Social Work, 8, 9 endorsement of authority, as forming countervailing power, 75 ends, autonomy over, 342
energy for learning, maximizing, 130–132
enrichment, job, 185
EPWSI (Evaluation Process within Supervision Inventory), 269
Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), 233 equality, in educational supervision, 144
equal opportunity regulations, 246
equitable salaries, 177
ethical dilemmas: in managed care context, 337; in supervision, 342–343
ethical guidelines for social work supervision, 57
ethical obligation, evaluation as, 246–247
ethics code, NASW, 17, 32, 246
ethnicity: as content area of educational supervision, 100; factors related to in supervision, 222–223
evaluation: communication and use of, 263–265; conference process, 260–263; controversial questions regarding, 269–274; definition of, 246–247; desirable procedures for, 254–260; dislike of, 251–254; objectives of, 250–251; of progress over time, 134; recordings in, 310; sources of information for, 265–267; of supervisor and supervision, 267–269; value to agency, 249; value to client, 250; value to supervisor, 250; value to worker, 248–249; of work, 40–42
"Evaluation Is Not for Friends" game, 198
Evaluation Process within Supervision Inventory (EPWSI), 269
evidence-based practice (EBP), 339–340, 346
evidence-based practice (EBP), 339–340, 346
equal opportunity regulations, 246
equitable salaries, 177
ethic dilemmas: in managed care context, 337; in supervision, 342–343
ethical guidelines for social work supervision, 57
ethics code, NASW, 17, 32, 246
ethnicity: as content area of educational supervision, 100; factors related to in supervision, 222–223
evaluation: communication and use of, 263–265; conference process, 260–263; controversial questions regarding, 269–274; definition of, 246–247; desirable procedures for, 254–260; dislike of, 251–254; objectives of, 250–251; of progress over time, 134; recordings in, 310; sources of information for, 265–267; of supervisor and supervision, 267–269; value to agency, 249; value to client, 250; value to supervisor, 250; value to worker, 248–249; of work, 40–42
"Evaluation Is Not for Friends" game, 198
Evaluation Process within Supervision Inventory (EPWSI), 269
evidence-based practice (EBP), 339–340, 346
exculpatory themes, in supportive supervision, 188–189 executive administrators, role of, 10
exemplary behavior, supervisor focus on, 217–218 expectations: conflicting, over supervisor role, 221; dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–188; effect on learning, 131; regarding supervisor expertise, 218–219; as source of stress, 176 experience: as preparation for becoming supervisor, 209–210; requirements for supervisor, 206–207; sharing of in group supervision, 276–277; of supervisor, effect on learning, 142
experiential-existential orientation, 111–112
INDEX

expansive learning patterns, 137 expertise, of supervisor: effect on learning, 142;
expectations regarding, 218–219; requirements for, 206–207
expert power: general discussion, 62; interrelationships
among types of power, 62–66
explicit feedback, need for in evaluation, 262
explicit learning, 136–137 expressive-supportive function of supervision. See supportive supervision
external control of agency policy, 21
externalization of stress, 185–186 external risks related to learning, 139
extrinsic motives, 128
extrinsic satisfaction related to becoming
supervisor, 208
face-to-face communication, 45
failure: dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189; preparing learner for, 134; as source of stress, 176
fairness, need for in evaluation, 258–259
family stressors, as adding to job stress, 181
feedback: client, in live supervision, 317–320; EPWSI, 269; in evaluation conference, 260–261; in group supervision, 290–291; helpful, during individual supervisory conference, 112–116; importance of to supervision, 247; praise through positive, 133–134;
rooted in direct observation, 304; from supervisees, 268–269; for supervisor, lack of, 240; systematic,
41. See also evaluation females, factors in supervision involving, 224–227 feminine characteristics, in supervision, 224–225
financial crises, effect on social work supervision, 15–16
firing supervisees, 89
flattery, supervisee games involving, 197 flexibility, maximizing energy for learning through, 130 focus, as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 145–146
formal evaluation. See evaluation formal power, 62–63
forming group for supervision, 282–283
friendly visitors, Charity Organization Society
movement, 2–5
functional power, 62–63
games, supervisee: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200
gatekeeper, supervisor as, 29, 37, 343
gender, as content area of educational supervision, 100
gender factors: in ongoing supervision, 225–227;
sexism and social work administration, 343–344; in transition to supervision, 224–225; and workplace violence, 232–233
gender segregation, as source of stress, 178
general community, effect on social work supervision, 14–16
generalization, in individual supervisory conference, 109–110
glosses, records as, 302
goal setting, EPWSI, 269
good supervisors, 242–245
gossip, 48
graded sequence, presenting material in, 134
grapevines, 48
group, supervisee, influence on supervision, 19
group allocation of work, 35–36
group supervision: advantages of, 275–280; appropriate use of, 282; content, 285–286; definition of, 275;
disadvantages of, 280–282; forming, 282–283;
humor in, 291–292; illustration of, 295–298;
objectives, 283–285; process, 282, 287–291;
recordings in, 310; research on, 292–295; role playing, 286–287; termination, 291 group think, 281
group workers, observation of, 300
growth, in developmental supervision, 155–156 guilt, dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189
harassment, sexual, 233–236
“Heading Them Off at the Pass” game, 200
health care, changes in, 15
The Health of the Human Services Workforce, 192
helpful feedback, individual supervisory conference, 112–116
heresy, 50–51
heterogeneous performance, distinguishing in
evaluation, 259
heterosexism, 228–229
hierarchical position of supervisors, 4, 9–10, 178, 236–238
hiring, 28–30, 183–184
home stressors, as adding to job stress, 181
home visits, violence during, 233
homophobia, 228–229
honest feedback, need for in evaluation, 262
horizontal communication, 47–48
hostile clients, as source of stress, 171–172 hostile environment sexual harassment cases, 233 hostility, noncompliance resulting from, 85
host setting: as source of stress, 177–178; task delegation in, 40
human services management, 206
humor: in group supervision, 291–292; in supportive
supervision, 203–205
ideational frameworks, importance of to learning, 135–136
identification with supervisor, effect on learning, 140–141
identity, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213
"I Did Like You Told Me" game, 201
"If You Knew Dostoevsky Like I Know Dostoyevsky" game, 198–199 ignorance: feelings of as source of stress, 168; of supervisor, supervisee games involving, 198–199
"I Have a Little List" game, 200
imaginative repetition, 136
impartial exercise of authority, 67 improvement, as focus of evaluation, 259
imputed negligence, 54–57
"in-between" functionary, supervisor as, 10 incidental learning, 107–108 income, as source of stress, 177 independence, group supervision as step toward, 279–280. See also autonomy indirect observation of performance, 307–313 indirect service, supervision as, 10 indiscriminate praise, 133
individual development, evaluating workers against, 269 individualizing: evaluation, 259; teaching, 137–140 individual supervision: appropriate use of, 282; versus group supervision, 292–293 individual supervisory conference: assessment in, 255–256; case illustration, 120–125; ending, 116–117; helpful feedback, providing, 112–116; orientations to teaching and learning, 111–112; overview, 102; preparing, 104–105; process studies, 117–120; records of, importance of to evaluation, 255; as source of stress for supervisor, 220; structuring and scheduling, 102–104; teaching and learning, 105–111 indoctrination, through educational supervision, 94–95 inducting workers: in group supervision, 287; overview, 30–32; recordings, using for, 310–311 informal communication, 48 informal evaluation, 247
informal individual supervisory conferences, 103–104 information disclosure: in individual supervisory conference, 119–120; supervisee control of, 76–77; to supervisor, problems with, 301–304
information sources, for evaluation, 265–267 informed consent, 59, 307–308, 315 initiating structure aspect of supervision, 159–160, 224–225
in-service training, versus educational supervision, 90–91 inspecational supervision, 40–42
instilling motivation, 129–130
instructional materials, in individual supervisory conference, 105, 122–123 instrumental considerations of supervision, 159–160, 224–225, 278–279 interaction, evaluation conference, 262–263
interactional nature of educational supervision, 157 interactional process supervision, 160 interdisciplinary teams, 331 interesting content, effect on learning, 135 interminable supervision: attitudes towards, 325–327; balancing accountability and autonomy, 329–330; and de-bureaucratization, 330–333; overview, 321–324; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329; and worker autonomy, 324–325 internalization: of controls through educational supervision, 94–95, 97; of supervisor power, 63 internal risks related to learning, 139 interpersonal process recall, 310
interpersonal relationships, effect on learning, 140–142 interpersonal skills, 100–101
interpersonal supervision, 160
interprofessional collaboration, 330
intrerracial concerns in supervision, 222–223
intrerrater agreement, 272
interruptions, in individual supervisory conference, 103 interventions, direct supervisory. See live supervision interviews. See individual supervisory conference intrinsic motives, 128
intrinsic satisfaction, related to becoming supervisor, 208
isomorphism, and parallel process, 152–153
"It's All So Confusing" game, 201 job, significance of to worker as factor in burnout, 180 job analysis, importance of to evaluation, 254 job diversification, 185
job enrichment, 185
job mastery, as part of supportive supervision, 182–183 job-related stress: burnout, 164–166; caveats regarding, 191–194; overview, 159–164; worker personality as factor in burnout, 179–182 —implementing supportive supervision: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191
job rotation, 185
job satisfaction: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161
Joint Commission, 16
justice, proportional, 213 knowledge: of changes in social work profession, 219; providing opportunities to use, 135; of supervisor on subject matter, 142; for use, as objective of educational supervision, 109 knowledge base, development of, 6
"Lake Wobegon Effect", 256
lateral communication, 47–48
laughter. See humor
laws, employment, 29
leadership, in group supervision, 283–284
leadership behavior, gender and, 224 Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71 leadership orientation, supervisory relationship, 63 leadership styles, 159–160
learning: effect of evaluation on, 248; evaluation focused on, 351; in group supervision, 279, 280, 294; in individual supervisory conference, 105–111; orientations to, 111–112; resistances to, 99; as source of stress, 167–168 —conditions for effective: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
legal considerations of evaluation, 246 legal responsibility of supervisor, 32 legitimate power: general discussion, 61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
leniency bias, 256
LGBT (e.g., clients, workers, supervisors), 229 liability, vicarious, 54–57
liaison, community, supervisor as, 53 licensure: overview, 17–18; professional autonomy and, 327–329; and staff recruitment, 29 life stressors, as adding to job stress, 181 “Little Old Me” game, 201 live supervision: bug-in-the-ear technology, 313–316; bug-in-the-eye technology, 316; client feedback and outcomes in, 317–320; feedback during, 304; overview, 313; research on, 316–317 long-range objectives of supervision, 9 long-range planning, 34
low compliance observability, 73
loyalties, barriers to communication involving, 46 males: gender factors in supervision, 224–227; and workplace violence, 232 malicious obedience, 75–76
malpractice claims, 54–57
managed care revolution, 15 management: changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 212–213; participatory, 331.
See also administration management by objectives (MBO), 331 managerial styles, 159–160
managerial tasks, when becoming supervisor, 213–215 manipulating demand levels, supervisee games related to, 196–197 manualized supervision, 319
masculine characteristics, in supervision, 224–225
“Maximum Feasible Participation” game, 198
MBO (management by objectives), 331
“Mea Culpa, But Just This Once” game, 202 meaningful presentation of content, effect on learning, 135–137 means, autonomy over, 342
means to an end, supervision as, 11 men: gender factors in supervision, 224–227; and workplace violence, 232 middle-management positions of supervisors, 9–10 Milford Conference Report, 86
mindfulness training, 183
minimal use of authority, 68
minority groups, supervisees from, 222–223 mirror neurons, 152
modeling, teaching through, 107–108
modifiable aspects of performance, in evaluation, 259 monitoring: noncompliance, 85–87; supervisor attitudes toward, 70; work, 40–42 morale, dealing with in supportive supervision, 162 motivation: in educational diagnosis, 138–139; role in learning, 127–130; suppressive supervision focus on, 161 motives for change to supervisor status, 207–208 multicultural competence, 100. See also cross-cultural supervision mutuality, in individual supervisory conference, 110–111 mutual process, evaluation as, 257–258
narcissism, evaluation as threat to, 257
NASW Standards for Social Work Personnel Practices, 264
National Association of Social Workers (NASW): autonomy of workers, 324–325; best-practice training, 339; code of ethics of, 17, 32, 246; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; educational supervision and worker outcomes, 92; evaluation guidelines, 264; interminable supervision, 321–322, 323; job-related stress, 180; licensure, 17; malpractice claims, 54–55; professional autonomy and licensure, 328; sexism and social work administration, 344; success of supervision, 348; supervisor characteristics, 206, 207; supervisor preparation, 208–209, 210; supervisor self-appraisal, 267; supervisory record, 32–33; supportive supervision, 159, 164; termination of educational supervision, 327; workplace violence, 232
national conferences, 6
National Practitioner Data Bank (NPDB), 55 nature of tasks, as source of stress, 173–176 needs: in group supervision, dealing with, 288–289; learning meaningful in terms of, 128 negative feedback, reactions to, 261 negative information, communicating, 46, 47 negligence, imputed, 54–57
neurobiological explanation for parallel process, 152
neurons, mirror, 152
Downloaded from cupola.columbia.edu
newcomers, in group supervision, 280–281
New York Charity Organization Society, 7
New York School of Philanthropy, 7
nonacceptance, effect on learning, 131 nonauthoritarian authority, 66–68
noncompliance: disciplinary action, 85–89;
monitoring, 81–85; understanding, 81–85
non-zero-sum rewards, 60
normalization: in group supervision, 277; of unprofessional feelings, 186
norms, in group supervision, 287–288
NPDB (National Practitioner Data Bank), 55

obedience, malicious, 75–76
objectives: clarifying in supportive supervision, 190; consensus regarding, in evaluation, 259–260; of evaluation, 250–251; group supervision, 283–285;
management by, 331; maximizing energy for learning through, 130; poorly defined, as source of stress, 174–175; of therapy versus educational
supervision, 146

obligations, use of rules to create, 80 observation of performance: general discussion, 320– 321; importance of to evaluation, 254–255; nature of problem, 300–304; via recordings, 307–313
—direct: co-therapy supervision, 305–307; as
information source for evaluation, 266; one-way
mirrors, 305; overview, 304; sitting in, 305
—live supervision: bug-in-the-ear technology, 313–316;
bug-in-the-eye technology, 316; client feedback and outcomes in, 317–320; overview, 313; research on,
316–317
Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, 231 occupational stress. See job-related stress off-the-cuff individual supervisory conferences, 103–104
Ohio State Leadership Studies, 159–160
Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, 14
one-way mirrors, direct observation through, 305
on-the-job experience, as supervisor training, 345
on-the-spot individual supervisory conferences, 103–104
open confrontation, countering supervisee games with, 202–203
operational feedback, importance of, 116 OQ-45 self-report, 319
oral communication, 45
oral evaluation, 262–264
organization, as source of stress, 176–178. See also administration; agency system organizational bureaucracy, 27–28. See also bureaucracy
organizational communication: informal, 48; lateral, 47–48; overview, 43–44; problems in, 46–47;
process in, 44–46
organizational controls, need for in supervision, 25
organizational factors attenuating supervisory power, 72–74
outcomes, client, in live supervision, 317–320
overcompliance, 75–76
pace of learning, considering, 140
paid agents, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5
pain, and motivation for learning, 133 parallel process component in educational
supervision, 151–155
partializing learning, 134
partial praise, in supportive supervision, 190–191 participation: in learning, importance of, 134–135;
supervisee games involving, 198; of worker in
evaluation, 257–258
participatory management, 331
Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010, 338–339
patterns of relationship, in group supervision, 289
pay, as source of stress, 177
peer consultation, 330
peer group supervision, 329–330
peers: changed relationships with when becoming supervisor, 215–216; collaboration with, 330;
evaluation by, 270; as information source
for evaluation, 266; as source of support for supervisees, 195; as source of support for supervisors, 240. See also group supervision people, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97
performance: appraisal and feedback in evaluation conference, 260–261; as focus of educational supervision, 145; monitoring, 40–42; review of
for individual supervisory conference, 104–105; rewards for, 60; stimulating dissatisfaction in order to instill motivation, 129; supervisee games related to deficiency in, 201–202; supportive supervision as focused on, 160–161; work, as focus of evaluation, 258. See also evaluation; observation of performance
persistent use of authority, 68
personal face-to-face communication, 45 personal identity, changes in when becoming
supervisor, 215–216; collaboration with, 330;
evaluation by, 270; as information source
for evaluation, 266; as source of support for
supervisees, 195; as source of support for supervisors, 240. See also group supervision personnel, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97–100
perspective, supervisor, in supportive supervision, 189–190
phone communication, 45
physical arrangement, in group supervision, 283 physical danger, as source of stress, 172–173. See also danger
INDEX

physical symptoms of burnout, 165
place, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97 placing workers, 30–32
planned change, in educational supervision, 99 planning: agenda, encouraging worker participation in, 134–135; for group supervision, 284–285; teaching, 136; work, 33–34
"Pleading Fragility" game, 200 pleasure, and motivation for learning, 133 policy: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 50–51; change agent, supervisor as, 51–52; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 213; disciplinary action, 87–89; external control of agency, 21; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85 political environment of social work supervision, 14–16 positional power: general discussion, 61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 positive feedback: praise through, 133–134; reactions to, 261 positive relationship, importance of to evaluation, 256 postgraduate education, 8 power, supervisee games related to reducing disparity of, 198–200 power, supervisory: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; versus authority, 59–60; avoidance and abrogation of, 69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; interrelationships among types of, 62–66; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; problems in implementation of, overview, 68–69; rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and, 234–235; sources of, 59–62; supervisee countervailing power, 74–78 pragmatic rewards of noncompliance, 84–85 praise: in successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; supervisee games involving, 197; in supportive supervision, 190–191; tempering criticism with, 113 preparation: for change to supervisor status, 208–210; evaluation conference, 257, 260, 261–262; for group supervision, 284–285; individual supervisory conference, 104–105; of learner for failure, 134 prevention of stress, 183–184
primary socialization, 168 privacy, and disciplinary action, 88
private sector values, in social work profession, 17
private third parties, 16
problem-focused coping, 180–181 problems, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97, 101 procedures: in countervailing power of supervisees, 78; disciplinary action, 87–89; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85 process, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97 process recordings, use in supervision, 305 process studies, educational supervision, 117–120 profession, social work as: and bureaucracy, balancing, 340–342; changes in practice of, 218; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; emergence of, 6–8; and expert power, 65; influence on supervision, 16–17; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329 professional accomplishments, praising, 133 professional autonomy, and licensure, 327–329 professional development: evaluation based on, 270–271; in therapy versus in educational supervision, 145–148, 150–151 professional orientation, 196–197 professional socialization, 23–24 progress over time, evaluating, 134 promotion to supervisor positions, 207–208
proportional justice, 213
"Protect the Sick and the Infirm" game, 197–198
psychic punishments, 60
psychic rewards: from clients, and noncompliance, 84; general discussion, 60; given to supervisor by supervisee, 77; related to learning, 128 psychological considerations, in noncompliance, 85 psychological contract, between supervisor and supervisee, 257 psychological well-being, supportive supervision focus on, 162–163 psychotherapy, differentiating educational supervision from: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148 public attitudes toward social work, as source of stress, 178–179 public third parties, 16 punishment: by clients, and noncompliance, 84; by supervisor, 60–61, 87–89 punitive actions, 60–61, 87–89 purpose, as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 145–146 quality circles, 331–332
quid pro quo sexual harassment cases, 233 race factors, in supervision, 222–223
rapport, SWAI, 269
readiness for learning, 127–130
Reagan revolution, 14
realism: need for in supportive supervision, 192; vocabularies of, 187–188, 241 reality factors, taking into account in evaluation, 258 reality shock, when becoming supervisor, 211–212 recapitulation, in individual supervisory conference, 116 receptivity for learning, 127–130 reciprocal feedback, 268
recognition, as source of job satisfaction, 129 recognition of limitations theme, in supportive supervision, 188 recordings: in group supervision, 287; as information source for evaluation, 266; observation of performance through, 307–313; use in supervision, 305 records: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; as information source for evaluation, 265–266; as source of information, problems with, 301–304; supervisory, 32–33, 255; use in supervision, 305 recruitment, staff, 28–30, 183–184 referent power: general discussion, 61–62; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 reflection process component in educational supervision, 151–155 regulatory trend in social work, 17–18 rejection of input, in group supervision, 289 relationship power, 61–62 relationships: with client, as source of stress, 170–173; in group supervision, dealing with, 289; peer, changes in when becoming supervisor, 215–216
—supervisory: cross-gender, 225–227; importance in educational supervision, 140–142; influence on supervision, 19; over time, significance of versus cultural factors, 230; overview, 11; positive, importance of to evaluation, 256; sexual harassment in, 234–235; as source of stress, 168–170; supervisee games redefining, 197–198 remote controls, rules as, 80 repetition, imaginative, 136 reports: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; supervisory, 32–33; of workplace violence, 232 reprimands, 87–89
resistant clients, as source of stress, 171–172
resource allocation, accountability for, 21 resources, assuring access to, 43
respondeat superior, 54–57 responsibility: changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–211; promoting in supportive supervision, 190; sharing in supportive supervision, 187; as source of job satisfaction, 129; supervisee games involving, 201–202 reviewing work, 40–42
rewarding learning, importance of, 133–134 reward power: general discussion, 60; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66 rigid compliance, 75–76
rigidity, agency, 51
risks, related to learning, 139
rivalry, in group supervision, 280
role adoption, 345
role inductions, 257
role obligations, conflicting, in supportive supervision, 189 role performance invisibility, 73 role playing, in group supervision, 286–287 role relationships: as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 146–148; supervisor discomfort with in educational supervision, 144 role shock, 210
rotation, job, 185
routinized rewards, 60
rules: in countervailing power of supervisees, 78; disciplinary action, 87–89; functional value of, 78–81; in group supervision, 287–288; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85; for recording, 307–308
rumors, 48
ruptures, in supervisory relationship, 141 safeguarding motivation, 129–130 safety: concerns about as source of stress, 172–173; maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131; and noncompliance, 85; reactions to concerns in supportive supervision, 184
—in workplace, as problem for supervision: overview, 230–231; sexual harassment, 233–236; violence, 231–233
salary, as source of stress, 177 sandwich approach to evaluation interview, 262 satisfaction, job: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161 scheduling: evaluation conference, 260; group supervision, 283; individual supervisory conference, 102–104; in work assignment, 35 screening, pre-employment, 29–30 schools of social work, 7–8 secondary socialization, 168 secure atmosphere, maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131.
See also safety
"Seducing for Subversion" game, 196–197
selective identification, in educational diagnosis, 139
selective teaching, 136
selectivity, in communication, 47
self-awareness, as content area of educational supervision, 98–100 self-awkwardness, 309
self-determination, as not applicable to supervisee role, 214 self-disclosure, of sexual orientation, 229 self-discovery learning, 107
self-esteem, evaluation as threat to, 257 self-evaluation: encouraging, 121; in evaluation conference, 262–263; influence of group supervision on, 277; by supervisor, 267; value of to worker, 248–249 self-image of worker, as factor in burnout, 179–180 self-initiated learning, 107
self-observation, through recordings, 308–310 self-perception, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213 self-protection, barriers to communication involving, 46 self-reinforcing process, burnout as, 166 self-reports, as source of information, 301–304 self-statements, modifying in supportive supervision, 189 sequence, presenting material in graded, 134 service, continuity of, 42
service aspirations of social work practice, 11 sexism: and social work administration, 343–344; as source of stress, 178 sexual harassment, 233–236 sexual orientation: as content area of educational supervision, 100; as factor in supervision, 227–230 shared process, evaluation as, 257–258 sharing: in group supervision, 276–277; responsibility, in supportive supervision, 187 short-range objectives of supervision, 9 sitting in, direct observation through, 305
situational learning, 109
skills, balancing learning between challenges of practice and, 133
snooper supervision, 41
social distance from peers, in supervisor role, 215–216 socialization: professional, 23–24; through educational supervision, 94–95, 97, 168 social problems, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97 social relationship, games redefining supervisory relationship as, 198 social support networks, 195–196
social work administration. See administration social work education, development of, 5–8 social work examiners, state boards of, 17–18 social work profession: and bureaucracy, balancing, 340–342; changes in practice of, 218; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; emergence of, 6–8; and expert power, 65; influence on supervision, 16–17; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–328 social work supervision. See specific types of supervision; supervision solidarity, developing through group supervision, 278 somatic symptoms of stress, 180–181
“So What Do You Know About It?” game, 199 specialized education, emergence of, 6–8 specific feedback, 116, 262
specific nature of evaluation, 259
specific praise, 133
staff development: versus educational supervision, 90–91; evaluation focused on, 250–251
staff recruitment and selection, 28–30, 183–184 standards: disciplinary action, 87–89; evaluating workers against, 269, 271–272; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85 Standards for Social Work Practice in Child Protection, 159

state boards of social work examiners, 17–18
state codes of conduct, 32
state conferences, 6
states, supervisor education requirements for, 346 stimulating motivation, 129–130 stress: supervisor coping with, 239–242. See also job-related stress —ongoing, involved in supervisor role: diversity challenges overview, 222; gender factors, 224–227; general discussion, 217–222, 238–239; hierarchical position, problems related to, 236–238; race and ethnicity factors, 222–223; safety in workplace, 230–236; sexual orientation factors, 227–230 structure: as associated with masculine characteristics, 224–225; maximizing energy for learning through, 130 structure scale, Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71
summarization, in individual supervisory conference, 116
“The Superannuated Man,” 215
supervisee-centered orientation, 111–112 supervisee games: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200 supervisee group, influence on supervision, 19 supervisees. See workers supervision: definition of, 8, 11; demography of, 19–20; development of education for social work, 5–8; education for, 344–346; empirical validation of definition, 11–14; evaluation of, 267–269; explaining to workers, 32–33; functions of, 8–9; hierarchical position of supervisors, 9–10; historical development of, 1–5; as indirect service, 10; as interactional process, 10–11; as means to an end, 15; objectives of, 9; positive values of, 346–349; significance of, 19–20. See also specific types of supervision —ecology of: agency system, 18; community, 14–16; overview, 14; social work profession, 16–17; state boards of social work examiners, 17–18; supervisor–supervisee dyad, 19; third-party stakeholders, 16; unit peer group, 18–19; worker–client dyad, 19
—interminable attitudes towards, 325–327; balancing accountability and autonomy, 329–330; and debureaucratization, 330–333; overview, 321–324; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329; and worker autonomy, 324–325 texting, communication through, 45–46 theoretical bias, in evaluation, 272–273 theoretical orientation: presenting content within, 135–136; use in teaching, 108 therapy, differentiating educational supervision from: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148 violence: reactions to in supportive supervision, 184; as source of stress, 172–173; in workplace, as problem for supervision, 231–233
visitors, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5 vocabularies of realism, 187–188, 241 volunteers, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5 wages, as source of stress, 177 welfare reform, 14–15
well-being, supportive supervision focus on, 162–163
“What You Don’t Know Won’t Hurt Me” game, 201
white supervisors, 222–223
“Who Me? Not Me” game, 201–202
Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services, 11–12 withdrawal, emotional, as symptom of burnout, 166 withdrawal, information from supervisor, 46, 301–304 “Woe Is Me” game, 200
women, factors in supervision involving, 224–227 work: coordinating, 42–43; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating, 40–42; nature and context of as source of stress, 173–176; performance as focus of evaluation, 258; as source of job satisfaction, 129 work assignment: criteria for, 34–35; overview, 34; problems in, 36–37; procedures for, 35–36 work clique, as source of support for worker, 195
work delegation, 37–40
worker–client dyad, influence on supervision, 19 workers: adaptations by as source of support for, 196; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; attitudes towards evaluation, 253–254; attributes involved in work delegation by, 39–40; autonomy of and interminable supervision, 324–325; changes in thinking about when becoming supervisor, 214–215; communication with, 43–48; as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97–100; countervailing power of, 74–78; educational supervision outcomes, 92–93; evaluation conference preparation by, 261–262; evaluation focused on, 250–251; gender factors in ongoing supervision, 225–227; group membership responsibilities, 290–291; importance of educational supervision to, 92; inducting and placing, 30–32; inducting in group supervision, 287; influence on supervision, 19; interrelationships among types of supervisory power, 62–66; relationship of educational to administrative supervision, 94–95; role of in supervisory relationship, 244; self-evaluation by, 248–249, 262–263; as source of stress for supervisor, workgroups, new employee induction into, 31
working alliance, 256
working relationships, supervision of, 43. See also relationships workplace violence, 231–233
work planning, 33–34
work setting, as source of stress, 176–178
workshops, stress management, 185 work stress. See job-related stress written communication, 45–46
written evaluation, 264–265 written records, as information source for evaluation, 265–266. See also records

“Yes-butting” game, 202

zero-sum rewards, 60