

CONTRIBUTORS

NICK ACHESON is a lecturer in social policy and member of the Social and Policy Research Institute at the University of Ulster. His research interests focus on voluntary action and social movements in regions of ethnic conflict and the reshaping of voluntary action in contemporary reforms of the welfare state.

RONALD ALTHOUSE is a professor of sociology and formerly chair of the Division of Sociology and Anthropology at West Virginia University. He has a long record of involvement in community sociology and survey research in the Appalachian Region.

LISA BEDINGER is a dialogue and deliberation practitioner with a focus in organizing, convening and moderating diversity deliberations on college and university campuses.

COREY COLYER is an associate professor and director of graduate studies in the Division of Sociology and Anthropology at West Virginia University. His research focuses on people processing institutions and the interaction between agencies of social control.

NORMAN CONTI is an associate professor in the Department of Sociology and the Graduate Center for Social and Public Policy at Duquesne University. He has published ethnographies of recruitment, socialization, ethics training, and masculinity in policing as well as an analysis of the social networks that develop within recruit cohorts.

DOLLY FORD is a social worker at the WVU Children's Hospital. She was formerly a senior lecturer and program director of the Nova Institute at West Virginia University. She is interested in organizing and moderating campus and community deliberations.

ERNA GELLES is an associate professor of public administration in the Hatfield School of Government at Portland State University. Her research and teaching interests are largely in nonprofit theory and management. Her community-based research and practice is integrally linked with organizations serving diverse populations.

JERI KIRBY is a Ph.D. candidate in political science and lecturer in the Division of Sociology and Anthropology, West Virginia University, where she teaches courses in deviance and social control.

ROGER A. LOHMANN is a professor emeritus of social work and chairman of the board of the Nova Institute at West Virginia University. He is editor emeritus of Nonprofit Management and Leadership, author of Breaking Even (1980) and The Commons (1992), coauthor of Social Administration (2002), and coeditor of Rural Social Work Practice. He developed and taught a deliberation-based advanced social policy course in the MSW program at West Virginia.

RICHARD F. LUDEMAN is founder and principal of Carta Nova Consulting, in Portland, Oregon.

JENNIFER MCINTOSH is executive officer for social justice and director, AA/EEO at West Virginia University.

CARL MILOFSKY is professor of sociology at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. He is author of Smallville: Institutionalizing Community in Small Town America; coauthor with Albert Hunter of Pragmatic Liberalism: Constructing a Civil Society; and coeditor with Ram Cnaan of The Handbook of Community Movements and Local Organizations.

CHARLES MORRIS is associate director of the Office of Social Justice at West Virginia University.

TEDDY NEMEROFF was a cofounder of the first campus sustained dialogue initiative at Princeton University. After a stint in management consulting, he founded a sustained dialogue program to address political and economic conflict at an NGO in South Africa. Teddy graduated from Columbia Law School in 2009.

NEAL NEWFIELD is an associate professor of social work at West Virginia University and a documentary photographer. He has taught a travel course on peace and reconciliation in Ireland/Northern Ireland and for the past five years has been helping to develop social work as a discipline in Vietnam and Cambodia.

SUSAN NEWFIELD is an associate professor of nursing at West Virginia University with interests in community mental health and human system relationships. For a decade she has run a high school clinic for troubled teens. Susan works in Vietnam and Cambodia furthering women's health and mental health nursing.

JIM NOLAN is an associate professor in the Division of Sociology and Anthropology at West Virginia University where he teaches courses in the area of crime and social control. His research currently focuses on neighborhood dynamics and public safety, police procedures, crime measurement, and hate crimes.

PRIYA PARKER was cofounder of Sustained Dialogue at the University of Virginia and second program director of the Sustained Dialogue Campus Network. She has worked for the Dalai Lama's peace foundation and as a policy analyst for PRS Legislative Research in New Delhi. Priya is pursuing her MPA from the Harvard Kennedy School and MBA from MIT Sloan.

DAVID ROBINSON is a partner in Robinson Driver Partnership, director of the New Zealand Social and Civic Policy Institute, and a senior research associate at the Institute of Policy Studies, Victoria University of Wellington.

DAVID M. RYFE is associate professor and senior scholar in the Reynolds School of Journalism, University of Nevada, Reno. He has written extensively on the practice of public deliberation, political communication, and American news media.

HAROLD H. SAUNDERS is president of the International Institute for Sustained Dialogue and director of international affairs at the Kettering Foundation. As assistant secretary of state, he was a principal drafter of the Camp David accords. He is author of A Public Peace Process: Sustained Dialogue to Transform Racial and Ethnic Conflicts and Politics Is About Relationship.

DAVID TUKEY, cofounder at Princeton University of the first sustained dialogue organization on campus, holds a Ph.D. in neuroscience and is a neurobiologist at NYU Medical Center. He serves on boards of the International Institute for Sustained Dialogue and Princeton Prize in Race Relations and chairs the board of the Sustained Dialogue Campus Network. He was a deputy regional campaign manager for McCain-Palin.

JON VAN TIL is professor emeritus of urban studies and community planning at Rutgers University, Camden. His ten books include Breaching Derry's Walls (2008), Growing Civil Society (2000, 2008), and Mapping the Third Sector (1988). He is a Fulbright Specialist in Hungary.

DAVID WILLIAMS is professor emeritus and former assistant dean for the School of Applied Social Sciences and chair of the Department of Public Administration at West Virginia University.

