

❖ INDEX

abrogation of authority by supervisors, 69–72
 absenteeism, 41–42
 abuse, as source of stress, 173
 acceptance, atmosphere of, 130–131 accountability: versus autonomy, 341–342; balancing autonomy and, 329–330
 achievement: promoting in supportive supervision, 190; as source of job satisfaction, 129 active involvement, in learning, 134–135 actively engaging learner in assessment, 140 adaptations, supervisee, as source of support, 196
 administration: administrative buffer, supervisor as,
 49–51; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; change agent, supervisor as, 51–52; conflicts between profession and bureaucracy, 340–342; influence on task delegation, 40; interminable supervision and debureaucratization, 330–333; practices enhancing supervisory authority, 68; role of, 10; sexism and, 343–344; supervisor evaluation by, 269; working with, problems related to, 236–238. See also supervisory authority and power
 administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51 administrative objectives of evaluation, 250 administrative supervision: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 49–51; advocate role of supervisor,
 48–49; change agent, supervisor as, 51–53;
 communication function, 43–48; continued, 326;
 coordinating work, 42–43; definitions of, 8–9, 11–14; educational supervision and, 93–96; and evaluation, 270–271; explaining supervision, 32–33;
 good supervisor characteristics, 243; inducting and placing workers, 30–32; in managed care context, 335–336; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating work, 40–42; organizational bureaucracy, 27–28;
 overview, 160; as source of stress, 167; staff recruitment and selection, 28–30; and supportive supervision, 161; value of evaluation to, 249; work assignment, 34–37; work delegation, 37–40; work planning, 33–34
 —problems in implementation: disciplinary action, 87–89; noncompliance, 81–87; rules, functional value of, 78–81; vicarious liability, 54–57. See also supervisory authority and power administrator, good supervisor as, 243. See also administration
 adult learning. See learning advancement, as source of job satisfaction, 129 advocate role of supervisor, 48–49
 Affordable Care Act of 2010, 338–339
 African American supervisees, 222–223

- agency system: accountability to community, 21;
administrative and educational supervision in,
94; change agent, supervisor as, 51; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 212–213; evaluation use in, 263–264; and expert power, 65–66; external control of policy, 21;
factors attenuating supervisory power, 72–74;
functional value of rules in, 78–81; influence on supervision, 18–19; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; objectives of educational supervision in,
146; significance of supervision in, 20–25; as source of stress, 176–178, 221; supervisor as administrative buffer, 50–51; value of evaluation to, 249
- agenda planning, encouraging worker participation in, 134–135
- agent-supervisors: Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5; educational supervision by, 7
- alliance, working, 256
- “All or Nothing at All” game, 199–200
- ameliorating stress, 184–191
- amplifying effect of supervision, 4–5
- androgynous approach to leadership, 224–225
- antithetical demands: involving hierarchical position of supervisor, 238; need to balance as source of stress, 175; as source of stress for supervisor, 221
- anxiety: caused by evaluation, 257; for learning, 125; mitigating in order to foster learning, 130;
regarding change, effect of on learning, 131;
stimulating in order to instill motivation, 129. See also job-related stress; stress
- appealing evaluation, 265
- appraisal, performance, in evaluation conference,
260–261. See also evaluation
- apprenticeship programs, 5, 7
- arbitrary exercise of authority, 67
- assault on clients, 186–187
- assessment: actively engaging learner in, 140; versus evaluation, 247; during individual supervisory conference, 255–256. See also evaluation
- assignment, work. See work assignment
- Association of Social Work Boards (ASWB), 18, 101, 327–328
- atmosphere: for learning, providing, 120, 121–122;
maximizing energy for learning through,
130–131
- attenuation of supervisory power, 72–74
- attitudes: changes in when becoming supervisor,
212–213; of worker, as factor in burnout, 179
- audio recordings: in group supervision, 287; indirect observation through, 307–313; as information source for evaluation, 266; use in supervision, 305
- authority, supervisory: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; avoidance and abrogation of,
69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; legitimation of, 66; nonauthoritarian, 66–68; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; versus power, 59–60;
problems in implementation of, overview, 68–69;
rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and,
234–235; sources of, 59; supervisee countervailing power, 74–78
- autonomous supervisors, 9–10
- autonomy: balancing accountability and, 329–330;
factors attenuating supervisory power and authority, 72–74; group supervision as step toward,
279–280; and interminable supervision, 321,
324–325; maximizing energy for learning through,
130; professional, and licensure, 327–329; of social work profession, 21–22, 25; of supervisor, restraints on, 221; and task delegation, 37–40; threats to as source of stress, 168; value of evaluation due to, 250
- availability, supervisor, 183
- avoidance, of authority by supervisors, 69–72
- baccalaureate supervisors, 206
- bad news, communicating, 46, 47
- balance, need for in evaluation, 258
- behavior: changes in when becoming supervisor, 212;
as focus of evaluation, 258–259
- behavioral symptoms of burnout, 165
- belonging, developing through group supervision, 278
- “Be Nice to Me Because I Am Nice to You” game, 197
- best-practice training, 339
- BITE (bug-in-the-ear) technology, 313–316
- blame: dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189; supervisee games involving, 201–202
- boards of social work examiners, state, 17–18
- Boston Associated Charities, 2
- Boston Charities Organization, 5
- boundary positions, social workers in, 177–178
- buffer, supervisor as administrative, 49–51
- bug-in-the-ear (BITE) technology, 313–316
- bug-in-the-eye technology, 316
- bureaucracy: interminable supervision and debureaucratization, 330–333; organizational,
27–28; and profession, balancing, 340–342
- bureaucratic orientation, 196–197
- burnout: caveats regarding, 191–194; general discussion, 164–166; supervisor experience of, 240– 241; symptoms of, 165–166, 179; worker personality
as factor in, 179–182. See also job-related stress
- implementing supportive supervision: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191
- calling, sense of as factor in burnout, 182
- career-long supervision. See interminable supervision
- career planning, effect of evaluation on, 249
- caring, as factor in burnout, 179–180
- case distribution: assignment, 34–37; delegation,
37–40; planning, 33–34
- caseload management, 35, 185
- caseload size, of supervisors, 211
- case material, in group supervision, 285–286
- case records, as source of information, 301–304
- case review, in individual supervisory conference, 104
- “Casework à Trois” game, 201

- challenges of practice, balancing learning between skills and, 133
- change: effect of anxiety regarding on learning, 131; planned, in educational supervision, 99; in social work profession, effect on supervisor, 219; as source of stress, 167–168
- change agent, supervisor as, 51–53
- Charity Organization Society movement: education in, 5–7; supervision in, 1–5
- child welfare services, 86
- circular arrangement, in group supervision, 283
- circular nature of feelings leading to burnout, 166
- Civil Rights Act of 1964, 234
- clarity, maximizing energy for learning through, 130
- client focus, SWAI, 269
- clients: assault on, 186–187; as captives of agency, 23; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 213; educational supervision outcomes, 93; feedback and outcomes in live supervision, 317–320; feedback from, using supervision to elicit, 115; as information source for evaluation, 266, 267; and noncompliance, understanding, 82, 83–84; parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155; protection of through rules, 80; sexual harassment by, 235–236; sharing of experience with in group supervision, 276–277; as source of stress, 170–173; as source of supervisory authority, 59; as source of support for supervisees, 194–195; supervisee games redefining worker as, 197; supervisor as administrative buffer, 49–50; supervisor focus on, effect on learning, 143; value of evaluation to, 250
- clinical approach, use in teaching, 108
- clinical case material, in group supervision, 285–286
- clinical-educational supervision. See educational supervision
- clinical practice, as preparation for becoming supervisor, 209–210
- clinical supervision, 90
- closure, lack of in social work, 172
- code of ethics, NASW, 17, 32, 246
- codes of conduct, state, 32
- coercive power: general discussion, 60–61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
- cognitive reframing, 241
- cohesion, in group supervision, 278, 281
- collaboration, with peers, 330
- Columbia University School of Social Work, 7
- commitment: as factor in burnout, 182; involved in effective evaluation, 255; supportive supervision focus on, 161
- communication: of evaluation, 263–265; in group supervision, 281
- communication function, in administrative supervision: informal communication, 48; lateral communication, 47–48; overview, 43–44; problems in, 46–47; process in, 44–46
- community: accountability to, 21; attitudes toward social work, as source of stress, 178–179; authority as deriving from, 58–59; influence on supervision, 14–16
- community liaison, supervisor as, 53
- community workers, observation of, 300–301
- competence: association with stress and burnout, 180–181; confirmation of, lack of as source of stress, 175–176; contributing to as part of supportive supervision, 182–183; influence of group supervision on assessment of, 277; maximizing energy for learning through, 132; of supervisor, effect on learning, 142
- competent caring, 180
- competition, in group supervision, 280
- complaints, supervisor as administrative buffer from, 49–50
- compliance, rigid, 75–76
- compliments: in supportive supervision, 190–191; tempering criticism with, 113
- conceptual teaching, 109–110
- concrete-active learning orientation, 137
- conferences: evaluation, 260–263; state and national, 6. See also evaluation; group supervision; individual supervisory conference
- confidence: maximizing energy for learning through, 132; role in communication, 47
- confidentiality: in group supervision, 282; in managed care context, 337
- confirmation of competence, lack of as source of stress, 175–176
- conflicting role obligations, in supportive supervision, 189
- conflict resolution, 43
- conformity, in group supervision, 281
- confrontation, countering supervisee games with, 202–203
- conscious learning, 136–137
- consent, informed, 59, 307–308, 315
- consent of supervisees, as forming countervailing power, 75
- consideration, as aspect of supervision, 159–160, 224–225
- consideration scale, Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71
- consistency, of evaluation, 259
- constructive feedback, in individual supervisory conference, 112–116
- consultation, peer, 330
- contagion: element of in burnout, 166; as process related to client feelings, 170–171
- content: in educational supervision, 96–102; group supervision, 285–286; individual supervisory conference, 108–109; meaningful presentation of, effect on learning, 135–137; usefulness of, explaining, 127–128; worker participation in selection of, 134–135
- context of tasks, as source of stress, 173–176

- continued supervision. See interminable supervision
- continuity of service, 42
- continuous process: evaluation as, 255; evaluation preparation as, 260
- contracts, supervision, 257, 332–333
- contradictory demands, as source of stress, 175
- control: in group supervision, 281; professional versus bureaucratic, 340–341; in supervisory authority, 58; of supervisory situation, supervisee games related to, 200–202. See also supervisory authority and power
- control paradox, 75–76
- cooption, 51
- coordinating work, 42–43
- coping strategies, for stress: supervisee, 180–181; supervisor, 239–242
- corrective feedback: in group supervision, 289; in individual supervisory conference, 112–116
- cost-effectiveness, of group supervision, 275–276
- co-therapy supervision, 305–307
- countertransference, 151, 168–169
- countervailing power of supervisees, 74–78
- coworkers, as source of support for supervisees, 195. See also peers
- credibility, role in communication, 47
- critical feedback: in group supervision, 290–291; in individual supervisory conference, 113–116. See also evaluation
- cross-cultural supervision: gender factors, 224–227; overview, 222; race and ethnicity factors, 222–223; sexual orientation factors, 227–230
- cross-gender supervisory relationships, 225–227
- cultural environment of social work supervision, 16
- cultural factors, educational supervision, 100. See also cross-cultural supervision
- cybertechnology, in observation, 320–321. See also specific technology by name
- danger: noncompliance resulting from, 85; reactions to in supportive supervision, 184; as source of stress, 172–173
- debureaucratization, and interminable supervision, 330–333
- decision-making by social workers: expectations regarding supervisor role in, 218–219; reactions to in supportive supervision, 187; as source of stress, 173
- dedication, as factor in burnout, 182
- defensive games. See supervisee games
- defiance, noncompliance resulting from, 85
- delegation, work, 37–40
- demand levels, supervisee games related to manipulating, 196–197
- demands: effect on learning, 131; involving hierarchical position of supervisor, 238; as source of stress for supervisor, 221
- democratic participation, supervisee games involving, 198
- demographic environment, of social work supervision, 16
- demography, of social work supervision, 19–20
- department, agency, influence on supervision, 18–19
- dependency: legitimate needs of supervisees, 132; power as based on, 74–75; supervisee games involving, 200–201
- depersonalizing authority, 67
- descriptive feedback, importance of, 116
- development: evaluating workers against, 269; evaluation based on, 270–271
- developmental experiences: in educational diagnosis, 139; and noncompliance, 85
- developmental supervision, 155–157
- deviance, 50–51
- diagnosis, educational: applying, 139–140; individualizing learner through, 137–139
- diagnostic assessment of emotional support needs, 179, 181–182
- Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders*, 83, 336
- dialectical-hypothetical teaching, 107
- dialogue, individual supervisory conference as, 106
- diary, supervision, 255
- didactic orientation, 111, 112
- didactic teaching, 107, 122–123
- directives, in individual supervisory conference, 118
- directivity, in work delegation, 37–40
- direct observation: co-therapy supervision, 305–307; feedback based on, 115; general discussion, 320; importance of to evaluation, 254–255; as information source for evaluation, 266; one-way mirrors, 305; overview, 304; sitting in, 305
- direct service workers, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5. See also workers
- direct supervisory interventions. See live supervision
- disciplinary action, 60–61, 87–89
- disclosure: in individual supervisory conference, 119–120; of sexual orientation, 229; supervisee control of, 76–77; to supervisor, problems with, 301–304
- discouragement, in supportive supervision, 162
- discretion, individual: of supervisor, restraints on, 221; and supervisory power and authority, 72–74. See also autonomy
- discussion: encouraging, 135; need for in evaluation, 262–263; in stress management, 185–186
- disillusionment, in supportive supervision, 162
- dismay, in supportive supervision, 162
- dismissal of supervisees, 89
- dissatisfaction: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; stimulating in order to instill motivation, 129; of supervisor, sources of, 239
- distance, from peers when becoming supervisor, 215–216
- distancing techniques, 201
- district committee, Charity Organization Society movement, 2
- diversification, job, 185

- diversity challenges in supervision. See cross-cultural supervision
- documentation: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; of disciplinary action, 89; supervisory, 32–33
- doing-one's-best theme, in supportive supervision, 188
- downward communication, 44, 48
- due diligence, when hiring, 29–30
- due process, 246
- EBP (evidence-based practice), 339–340, 346
- ecology of social work supervision: agency system, 18; community, 14–16; overview, 14; social work profession, 16–17; state boards of social work examiners, 17–18; supervisor–supervisee dyad, 19; third-party stakeholders, 16; unit peer group, 18–19; worker–client dyad, 19
- economic environment of supervision, 14–16
- economy, of group supervision, 275–276
- education: and professional socialization, 23–24; for social work, development of, 5–8; and staff recruitment, 29; for supervision, 344–346
- educational diagnosis: applying, 139–140; individualizing learner through, 137–139
- educational supervision: administrative supervision, relationship to, 93–96; case illustration, 120–125; and client outcomes, 93; content in, 96–102; definitions of, 8–9, 11–14; developmental supervision, 155–157; and evaluation, 270; good supervisor characteristics, 243–244; versus in-service training and staff development, 90–91; interminable, 325–326; in managed care context, 336; overview, 90, 160; parallel process component in, 151–155; process studies, 117–120; significance of, 91–92; as source of stress, 167–168; supervisor problems in implementation, 142–144; supervisory relationship, significance of, 140–142; and supportive supervision, 161; termination of, 327; and worker outcomes, 92–93
- conditions for effective teaching and learning: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, maximizing, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
- differentiating from therapy: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148
- individual supervisory conference: ending, 116–117; helpful feedback, providing, 112–116; orientations to teaching and learning, 111–112; overview, 102; preparing, 104–105; structuring and scheduling, 102–104; teaching and learning, 105–111
- educator, good supervisor as, 243–244
- EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission), 233
- efficacy of social work, as source of stress, 172
- e-mail communication, 45–46
- emergencies, individual supervisory conferences in response to, 103–104
- emotional support: in group supervision, 277–278; in supportive supervision, 161–163. See also supportive supervision
- emotional symptoms of burnout, 165–166
- emotion-focused coping, 180–181
- emotions, normalization of unprofessional, 186
- empathy: and contagion of client feelings, 170–171; in parallel process, 152
- employment laws, 29
- Encyclopedia of Social Work*, 8, 9
- endorsement of authority, as forming countervailing power, 75
- ends, autonomy over, 342
- energy for learning, maximizing, 130–132
- enrichment, job, 185
- EPWSI (Evaluation Process within Supervision Inventory), 269
- Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), 233
- equality, in educational supervision, 144
- equal opportunity regulations, 246
- equitable salaries, 177
- ethical dilemmas: in managed care context, 337; in supervision, 342–343
- ethical guidelines for social work supervision, 57
- ethical obligation, evaluation as, 246–247
- ethics code, NASW, 17, 32, 246
- ethnicity: as content area of educational supervision, 100; factors related to in supervision, 222–223
- evaluation: communication and use of, 263–265; conference process, 260–263; controversial questions regarding, 269–274; definition of, 246–247; desirable procedures for, 254–260; dislike of, 251–254; objectives of, 250–251; of progress over time, 134; recordings in, 310; sources of information for, 265–267; of supervisor and supervision, 267–269; value to agency, 249; value to client, 250; value to supervisor, 250; value to worker, 248–249; of work, 40–42
- “Evaluation Is Not for Friends” game, 198
- Evaluation Process within Supervision Inventory (EPWSI), 269
- evidence-based practice (EBP), 339–340, 346
- exculpatory themes, in supportive supervision, 188–189
- executive administrators, role of, 10
- exemplary behavior, supervisor focus on, 217–218
- expectations: conflicting, over supervisor role, 221; dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–188; effect on learning, 131; regarding supervisor expertise, 218–219; as source of stress, 176
- experience: as preparation for becoming supervisor, 209–210; requirements for supervisor, 206–207; sharing of in group supervision, 276–277; of supervisor, effect on learning, 142
- experiential-existential orientation, 111–112

- experiential learning patterns, 137
- expertise, of supervisor: effect on learning, 142; expectations regarding, 218–219; requirements for, 206–207
- expert power: general discussion, 62; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
- explicit feedback, need for in evaluation, 262
- explicit learning, 136–137
- expressive-supportive function of supervision. See supportive supervision
- external control of agency policy, 21
- externalization of stress, 185–186
- external risks related to learning, 139
- extrinsic motives, 128
- extrinsic satisfaction related to becoming supervisor, 208

- face-to-face communication, 45
- failure: dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189; preparing learner for, 134; as source of stress, 176
- fairness, need for in evaluation, 258–259
- family stressors, as adding to job stress, 181
- feedback: client, in live supervision, 317–320; EPWSI, 269; in evaluation conference, 260–261; in group supervision, 290–291; helpful, during individual supervisory conference, 112–116; importance of to supervision, 247; praise through positive, 133–134; rooted in direct observation, 304; from supervisees, 268–269; for supervisor, lack of, 240; systematic, 41. See also evaluation
- females, factors in supervision involving, 224–227
- feminine characteristics, in supervision, 224–225
- financial crises, effect on social work supervision, 15–16
- firing supervisees, 89
- flattery, supervisee games involving, 197
- flexibility, maximizing energy for learning through, 130
- focus, as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 145–146
- formal evaluation. See evaluation
- formal power, 62–63
- forming group for supervision, 282–283
- friendly visitors, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5
- functional power, 62–63

- games, supervisee: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200
- gatekeeper, supervisor as, 29, 37, 343
- gender, as content area of educational supervision, 100
- gender factors: in ongoing supervision, 225–227; sexism and social work administration, 343–344; in transition to supervision, 224–225; and workplace violence, 232–233
- gender segregation, as source of stress, 178
- general community, effect on social work supervision, 14–16
- generalization, in individual supervisory conference, 109–110
- glosses, records as, 302
- goal setting, EPWSI, 269
- good supervisors, 242–245
- gossip, 48
- graded sequence, presenting material in, 134
- grapevines, 48
- group, supervisee, influence on supervision, 19
- group allocation of work, 35–36
- group supervision: advantages of, 275–280; appropriate use of, 282; content, 285–286; definition of, 275; disadvantages of, 280–282; forming, 282–283; humor in, 291–292; illustration of, 295–298; objectives, 283–285; process, 282, 287–291; recordings in, 310; research on, 292–295; role playing, 286–287; termination, 291
- group think, 281
- group workers, observation of, 300
- growth, in developmental supervision, 155–156
- guilt, dealing with in supportive supervision, 187–189

- harassment, sexual, 233–236
- “Heading Them Off at the Pass” game, 200
- health care, changes in, 15
- The Health of the Human Services Workforce*, 192
- helpful feedback, individual supervisory conference, 112–116
- heresy, 50–51
- heterogeneous performance, distinguishing in evaluation, 259
- heterosexism, 228–229
- hierarchical position of supervisors, 4, 9–10, 178, 236–238
- hiring, 28–30, 183–184
- home stressors, as adding to job stress, 181
- home visits, violence during, 233
- homophobia, 228–229
- honest feedback, need for in evaluation, 262
- horizontal communication, 47–48
- hostile clients, as source of stress, 171–172
- hostile environment sexual harassment cases, 233
- hostility, noncompliance resulting from, 85
- host setting: as source of stress, 177–178; task delegation in, 40
- human services management, 206
- humor: in group supervision, 291–292; in supportive supervision, 203–205

- ideational frameworks, importance of to learning, 135–136
- identification with supervisor, effect on learning, 140–141
- identity, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213

- "I Did Like You Told Me" game, 201
- "If You Knew Dostoyevsky Like I Know Dostoyevsky" game, 198–199
- ignorance: feelings of as source of stress, 168; of supervisor, supervisee games involving, 198–199
- "I Have a Little List" game, 200
- imaginative repetition, 136
- impartial exercise of authority, 67
- improvement, as focus of evaluation, 259
- imputed negligence, 54–57
- "in-between" functionary, supervisor as, 10
- incidental learning, 107–108
- income, as source of stress, 177
- independence, group supervision as step toward, 279–280. See also autonomy
- indirect observation of performance, 307–313
- indirect service, supervision as, 10
- indiscriminate praise, 133
- individual development, evaluating workers against, 269
- individualizing: evaluation, 259; teaching, 137–140
- individual supervision: appropriate use of, 282; versus group supervision, 292–295
- individual supervisory conference: assessment in, 255–256; case illustration, 120–125; ending, 116–117; helpful feedback, providing, 112–116; orientations to teaching and learning, 111–112; overview, 102; preparing, 104–105; process studies, 117–120; records of, importance of to evaluation, 255; as source of stress for supervisor, 220; structuring and scheduling, 102–104; teaching and learning, 105–111
- indoctrination, through educational supervision, 94–95
- inducting workers: in group supervision, 287; overview, 30–32; recordings, using for, 310–311
- informal communication, 48
- informal evaluation, 247
- informal individual supervisory conferences, 103–104
- information disclosure: in individual supervisory conference, 119–120; supervisee control of, 76–77; to supervisor, problems with, 301–304
- information sources, for evaluation, 265–267
- informed consent, 59, 307–308, 315
- initiating structure aspect of supervision, 159–160, 224–225
- in-service training, versus educational supervision, 90–91
- inspectional supervision, 40–42
- instilling motivation, 129–130
- instructional materials, in individual supervisory conference, 105, 122–123
- instrumental considerations of supervision, 159–160, 224–225, 278–279
- interaction, evaluation conference, 262–263
- interactional nature of educational supervision, 157
- interactional process, supervision as, 10–11
- interdisciplinary teams, 331
- interesting content, effect on learning, 135
- interminable supervision: attitudes towards, 325–327; balancing accountability and autonomy, 329–330; and debureaucratization, 330–333; overview, 321–324; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329; and worker autonomy, 324–325
- internalization: of controls through educational supervision, 94–95, 97; of supervisor power, 63
- internal risks related to learning, 139
- interpersonal process recall, 310
- interpersonal relationships, effect on learning, 140–142
- interpersonal skills, 100–101
- interpersonal supervision, 160
- interprofessional collaboration, 330
- interracial concerns in supervision, 222–223
- interrater agreement, 272
- interruptions, in individual supervisory conference, 103
- interventions, direct supervisory. See live supervision
- interviews. See individual supervisory conference
- intrinsic motives, 128
- intrinsic satisfaction, related to becoming supervisor, 208
- isomorphism, and parallel process, 152–153
- "It's All So Confusing" game, 201
- job, significance of to worker as factor in burnout, 180
- job analysis, importance of to evaluation, 254
- job diversification, 185
- job enrichment, 185
- job mastery, as part of supportive supervision, 182–183
- job-related stress: burnout, 164–166; caveats regarding, 191–194; overview, 159–164; worker personality as factor in burnout, 179–182
- implementing supportive supervision: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191
- sources of: administrative supervision, 167; clients, 170–173; community attitudes toward social work, 178–179; educational supervision, 167–168; nature and context of tasks, 173–176; organization, 176–178; overview, 166–167; supervisor–supervisee relationship, 168–170
- job rotation, 185
- job satisfaction: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161
- Joint Commission, 16
- justice, proportional, 213
- knowledge: of changes in social work profession, 219; providing opportunities to use, 135; of supervisor on subject matter, 142; for use, as objective of educational supervision, 109
- knowledge base, development of, 6
- "Lake Wobegon Effect", 256
- lateral communication, 47–48
- laughter. See humor

- laws, employment, 29
- leadership, in group supervision, 283–284
- leadership behavior, gender and, 224
- Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71
- leadership orientation, supervisory relationship, 63
- leadership styles, 159–160
- learning: effect of evaluation on, 248; evaluation
 - focused on, 251; in group supervision, 279, 280, 294; in individual supervisory conference, 105–111; orientations to, 111–112; resistances to, 99; as source of stress, 167–168
- conditions for effective: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
- legal considerations of evaluation, 246
- legal responsibility of supervisor, 32
- legitimate power: general discussion, 61;
 - interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
- legitimation of authority, 58–59, 66, 75
- leniency bias, 256
- LGBT (e.g., clients, workers, supervisors), 229
- liability, vicarious, 54–57
- liaison, community, supervisor as, 53
- licensure: overview, 17–18; professional autonomy and, 327–329; and staff recruitment, 29
- life stressors, as adding to job stress, 181
- “Little Old Me” game, 201
- live supervision: bug-in-the-ear technology, 313–316;
 - bug-in-the-eye technology, 316; client feedback and outcomes in, 317–320; feedback during, 304; overview, 313; research on, 316–317
- long-range objectives of supervision, 9
- long-range planning, 34
- low compliance observability, 73
- loyalties, barriers to communication involving, 46

- males: gender factors in supervision, 224–227; and
 - workplace violence, 232
- malicious obedience, 75–76
- malpractice claims, 54–57
- managed care context, supervision in: administrative, 335–336; educational, 336; evidence-based practice, 339–340; overview, 333–335; supportive, 336–339
- managed care revolution, 15
- management: changes in attitude toward when
 - becoming supervisor, 212–213; participatory, 331.
 See also administration
- management by objectives (MBO), 331
- managerial styles, 159–160
- managerial tasks, when becoming supervisor, 213–215
- manipulating demand levels, supervisee games related to, 196–197
- manualized supervision, 319
- masculine characteristics, in supervision, 224–225
- “Maximum Feasible Participation” game, 198
- MBO (management by objectives), 331
- “Mea Culpa, But Just This Once” game, 202
- meaningful presentation of content, effect on learning, 135–137
- means, autonomy over, 342
- means to an end, supervision as, 11
- men: gender factors in supervision, 224–227; and
 - workplace violence, 232
- middle-management positions of supervisors, 9–10
- Milford Conference Report, 86
- mindfulness training, 183
- minimal use of authority, 68
- minority groups, supervisees from, 222–223
- mirror neurons, 152
- modeling, teaching through, 107–108
- modifiable aspects of performance, in evaluation, 259
- monitoring: noncompliance, 85–87; supervisor
 - attitudes toward, 70; work, 40–42
- morale, dealing with in supportive supervision, 162
- motivation: in educational diagnosis, 138–139; role in
 - learning, 127–130; supportive supervision focus on, 161
- motives for change to supervisor status, 207–208
- multicultural competence, 100. See also cross-cultural supervision
- mutuality, in individual supervisory conference, 110–111
- mutual process, evaluation as, 257–258

- narcissism, evaluation as threat to, 257
- NASW Standards for Social Work Personnel Practices*, 264
- National Association of Social Workers (NASW):
 - autonomy of workers, 324–325; best-practice training, 339; code of ethics of, 17, 32, 246; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; educational supervision and worker outcomes, 92; evaluation guidelines, 264; interminable supervision, 321–322, 323; job-related stress, 180; licensure, 17; malpractice claims, 54–55; professional autonomy and licensure, 328; sexism and social work administration, 344; success of supervision, 348; supervisor characteristics, 206, 207; supervisor preparation, 208–209, 210; supervisor self-appraisal, 267; supervisory record, 32–33; supportive supervision, 159, 164; termination of educational supervision, 327; workplace violence, 232
- national conferences, 6
- National Practitioner Data Bank (NPDB), 55
- nature of tasks, as source of stress, 173–176
- needs: in group supervision, dealing with, 288–289;
 - learning meaningful in terms of, 128
- negative feedback, reactions to, 261
- negative information, communicating, 46, 47
- negligence, imputed, 54–57
- neurobiological explanation for parallel process, 152
- neurons, mirror, 152

- newcomers, in group supervision, 280–281
 New York Charity Organization Society, 7
 New York School of Philanthropy, 7
 nonacceptance, effect on learning, 131 nonauthoritarian authority, 66–68
 noncompliance: disciplinary action, 87–89;
 monitoring, 85–87; understanding, 81–85
 non-zero-sum rewards, 60 normalization: in group supervision, 277; of unprofessional feelings, 186
 norms, in group supervision, 287–288
 NPDB (National Practitioner Data Bank), 55
- obedience, malicious, 75–76
 objectives: clarifying in supportive supervision, 190; consensus regarding, in evaluation, 259–260; of evaluation, 250–251; group supervision, 283–285;
 management by, 331; maximizing energy for learning through, 130; poorly defined, as source of stress, 174–175; of therapy versus educational supervision, 146
 obligations, use of rules to create, 80 observation of performance: general discussion, 320– 321; importance of to evaluation, 254–255; nature of problem, 300–304; via recordings, 307–313 —direct: co-therapy supervision, 305–307; as information source for evaluation, 266; one-way mirrors, 305; overview, 304; sitting in, 305
 —live supervision: bug-in-the-ear technology, 313–316;
 bug-in-the-eye technology, 316; client feedback and outcomes in, 317–320; overview, 313; research on,
 316–317
 Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, 231 occupational stress. See job-related stress off-the-cuff individual supervisory conferences,
 103–104
 Ohio State Leadership Studies, 159–160
 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, 14 one-way mirrors, direct observation through, 305
 on-the-job experience, as supervisor training, 345
 on-the-spot individual supervisory conferences, 103–104
 open confrontation, countering supervisee games with, 202–203
 operational feedback, importance of, 116
 OQ-45 self-report, 319
 oral communication, 45
 oral evaluation, 262–264 organization, as source of stress, 176–178. See also administration; agency system organizational bureaucracy, 27–28. See also bureaucracy
 organizational communication: informal, 48; lateral, 47–48; overview, 43–44; problems in, 46–47;
 process in, 44–46
 organizational controls, need for in supervision, 25
 organizational factors attenuating supervisory power, 72–74
- outcomes, client, in live supervision, 317–320
 overcompliance, 75–76
- pace of learning, considering, 140
 paid agents, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5
 pain, and motivation for learning, 133 parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155
 partializing learning, 134
 partial praise, in supportive supervision, 190–191 participation: in learning, importance of, 134–135;
 supervisee games involving, 198; of worker in evaluation, 257–258
 participatory management, 331
 Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010, 338–339
 patterns of relationship, in group supervision, 289 pay, as source of stress, 177
 peer consultation, 330
 peer group supervision, 329–330 peers: changed relationships with when becoming supervisor, 215–216; collaboration with, 330;
 evaluation by, 270; as information source for evaluation, 266; as source of support for supervisees, 195; as source of support for supervisors, 240. See also group supervision people, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97
 performance: appraisal and feedback in evaluation conference, 260–261; as focus of educational supervision, 145; monitoring, 40–42; review of for individual supervisory conference, 104–105; rewards for, 60; stimulating dissatisfaction in order to instill motivation, 129; supervisee games related to deficiency in, 201–202; supportive supervision as focused on, 160–161; work, as focus of evaluation, 258. See also evaluation; observation of performance
 persistent use of authority, 68
 personal face-to-face communication, 45 personal identity, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213
 personality: supervisor, as source of stress for supervisor, 221; worker, as factor in burnout, 179–182
 Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, 15
 personal self, in therapy versus educational supervision, 145, 148–151
 personnel, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97–100
 perspective, supervisor, in supportive supervision, 189–190
 phone communication, 45
 physical arrangement, in group supervision, 283 physical danger, as source of stress, 172–173. See also danger

- physical symptoms of burnout, 165
- place, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97
- placing workers, 30–32
- planned change, in educational supervision, 99
- planning: agenda, encouraging worker participation in, 134–135; for group supervision, 284–285; teaching, 136; work, 33–34
- “Pleading Fragility” game, 200
- pleasure, and motivation for learning, 133
- policy: administrative buffer, supervisor as, 50–51; change agent, supervisor as, 51–52; changes in attitude toward when becoming supervisor, 213; disciplinary action, 87–89; external control of agency, 21; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85
- political environment of social work supervision, 14–16
- positional power: general discussion, 61; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
- positive feedback: praise through, 133–134; reactions to, 261
- positive relationship, importance of to evaluation, 256
- postgraduate education, 8
- power, supervisee games related to reducing disparity of, 198–200
- power, supervisory: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; versus authority, 59–60; avoidance and abrogation of, 69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; interrelationships among types of, 62–66; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; problems in implementation of, overview, 68–69; rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and, 234–235; sources of, 59–62; supervisee countervailing power, 74–78
- pragmatic rewards of noncompliance, 84–85
- praise: in successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; supervisee games involving, 197; in supportive supervision, 190–191; tempering criticism with, 113
- preparation: for change to supervisor status, 208–210; evaluation conference, 257, 260, 261–262; for group supervision, 284–285; individual supervisory conference, 104–105; of learner for failure, 134
- prevention of stress, 183–184
- primary socialization, 168
- privacy, and disciplinary action, 88
- private sector values, in social work profession, 17
- private third parties, 16
- problem-focused coping, 180–181
- problems, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97, 101
- procedures: in countervailing power of supervisees, 78; disciplinary action, 87–89; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85
- process, as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97
- process recordings, use in supervision, 305
- process studies, educational supervision, 117–120
- profession, social work as: and bureaucracy, balancing, 340–342; changes in practice of, 218; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; emergence of, 6–8; and expert power, 65; influence on supervision, 16–17; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329
- professional accomplishments, praising, 133
- professional autonomy, and licensure, 327–329
- professional development: evaluation based on, 270–271; in therapy versus in educational supervision, 145–148, 150–151
- professional orientation, 196–197
- professional socialization, 23–24
- progress over time, evaluating, 134
- promotion to supervisor positions, 207–208
- proportional justice, 213
- “Protect the Sick and the Infirm” game, 197–198
- psychic punishments, 60
- psychic rewards: from clients, and noncompliance, 84; general discussion, 60; given to supervisor by supervisee, 77; related to learning, 128
- psychological considerations, in noncompliance, 85
- psychological contract, between supervisor and supervisee, 257
- psychological well-being, supportive supervision focus on, 162–163
- psychotherapy, differentiating educational supervision from: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148
- public attitudes toward social work, as source of stress, 178–179
- public third parties, 16
- punishment: by clients, and noncompliance, 84; by supervisor, 60–61, 87–89
- punitive actions, 60–61, 87–89
- purpose, as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 145–146
- quality circles, 331–332
- quid pro quo* sexual harassment cases, 233
- race factors, in supervision, 222–223
- rapport, SWAI, 269
- readiness for learning, 127–130
- Reagan revolution, 14
- realism: need for in supportive supervision, 192; vocabularies of, 187–188, 241
- reality factors, taking into account in evaluation, 258
- reality shock, when becoming supervisor, 211–212
- recapitulation, in individual supervisory conference, 116
- receptivity for learning, 127–130
- reciprocal feedback, 268
- recognition, as source of job satisfaction, 129

- recognition of limitations theme, in supportive supervision, 188
- recordings: in group supervision, 287; as information source for evaluation, 266; observation of performance through, 307–313; use in supervision, 305
- records: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; as information source for evaluation, 265–266; as source of information, problems with, 301–304; supervisory, 32–33, 255; use in supervision, 305
- recruitment, staff, 28–30, 183–184
- referent power: general discussion, 61–62; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
- reflection process component in educational supervision, 151–155
- regulatory trend in social work, 17–18
- rejection of input, in group supervision, 289
- relationship power, 61–62
- relationships: with client, as source of stress, 170–173; in group supervision, dealing with, 289; peer, changes in when becoming supervisor, 215–216
 - supervisory: cross-gender, 225–227; importance in educational supervision, 140–142; influence on supervision, 19; over time, significance of versus cultural factors, 230; overview, 11; positive, importance of to evaluation, 256; sexual harassment in, 234–235; as source of stress, 168–170; supervisee games redefining, 197–198
- remote controls, rules as, 80
- repetition, imaginative, 136
- reports: countervailing power of supervisees, 76; supervisory, 32–33; of workplace violence, 232
- reprimands, 87–89
- resistant clients, as source of stress, 171–172
- resource allocation, accountability for, 21
- resources, assuring access to, 43
- respondeat superiore*, 54–57
- responsibility: changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–211; promoting in supportive supervision, 190; sharing in supportive supervision, 187; as source of job satisfaction, 129; supervisee games involving, 201–202
- reviewing work, 40–42
- rewarding learning, importance of, 133–134
- reward power: general discussion, 60; interrelationships among types of power, 62–66
- rigid compliance, 75–76
- rigidity, agency, 51
- risks, related to learning, 139
- rivalry, in group supervision, 280
- role adoption, 345
- role inductions, 257
- role modeling, 107
- role obligations, conflicting, in supportive supervision, 189
- role performance invisibility, 73
- role playing, in group supervision, 286–287
- role relationships: as differentiating educational supervision from therapy, 146–148; supervisor discomfort with in educational supervision, 144
- role shock, 210
- rotation, job, 185
- routinized rewards, 60
- rules: in countervailing power of supervisees, 78; disciplinary action, 87–89; functional value of, 78–81; in group supervision, 287–288; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85; for recording, 307–308
- rumors, 48
- ruptures, in supervisory relationship, 141
- safeguarding motivation, 129–130
- safety: concerns about as source of stress, 172–173; maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131; and noncompliance, 85; reactions to concerns in supportive supervision, 184
 - in workplace, as problem for supervision: overview, 230–231; sexual harassment, 233–236; violence, 231–233
- salary, as source of stress, 177
- sandwich approach to evaluation interview, 262
- satisfaction, job: aspects of supervision affecting, 160; principal sources of, 128–129; role of supervision in, 346–347; in social work profession, 193–194; of supervisor, 242; supportive supervision focus on, 161
- scheduling: evaluation conference, 260; group supervision, 283; individual supervisory conference, 102–104; in work assignment, 35
- schools of social work, 7–8
- screening, pre-employment, 29–30
- secondary socialization, 168
- secure atmosphere, maximizing energy for learning through, 130–131. See also safety
- “Seducing for Subversion” game, 196–197
- selective identification, in educational diagnosis, 139
- selective teaching, 136
- selectivity, in communication, 47
- self-awareness, as content area of educational supervision, 98–100
- self-awkwardness, 309
- self-determination, as not applicable to supervisee role, 214
- self-disclosure, of sexual orientation, 229
- self-discovery learning, 107
- self-esteem, evaluation as threat to, 257
- self-evaluation: encouraging, 121; in evaluation conference, 262–263; influence of group supervision on, 277; by supervisor, 267; value of to worker, 248–249
- self-image of worker, as factor in burnout, 179–180
- self-initiated learning, 107
- self-observation, through recordings, 308–310
- self-perception, changes in when becoming supervisor, 210–213

- self-protection, barriers to communication
 - involving, 46
- self-reinforcing process, burnout as, 166
- self-reports, as source of information, 301–304
- self-statements, modifying in supportive supervision, 189
- sequence, presenting material in graded, 134
- service, continuity of, 42
- service aspirations of social work practice, 11
- sexism: and social work administration, 343–344; as source of stress, 178
- sexual harassment, 233–236
- sexual orientation: as content area of educational supervision, 100; as factor in supervision, 227–230
- shared process, evaluation as, 257–258
- sharing: in group supervision, 276–277; responsibility, in supportive supervision, 187
- short-range objectives of supervision, 9
- sitting in, direct observation through, 305
- situational learning, 109
- skills, balancing learning between challenges of practice and, 133
- snooper supervision, 41
- social distance from peers, in supervisor role, 215–216
- socialization: professional, 23–24; through educational supervision, 94–95, 97, 168
- social problems, as content area of educational supervision, 96–97
- social relationship, games redefining supervisory relationship as, 198
- social support networks, 195–196
- social work administration. See administration
- social work education, development of, 5–8
- social work examiners, state boards of, 17–18
- social work profession: and bureaucracy, balancing, 340–342; changes in practice of, 218; countervailing power of supervisees, 77–78; emergence of, 6–8; and expert power, 65; influence on supervision, 16–17; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329
- social work supervision. See specific types of supervision; supervision
- solidarity, developing through group supervision, 278
- somatic symptoms of stress, 180–181
- “So What Do You Know About It?” game, 199
- specialized education, emergence of, 6–8
- specific feedback, 116, 262
- specific nature of evaluation, 259
- specific praise, 133
- staff development: versus educational supervision, 90–91; evaluation focused on, 250–251
- staff recruitment and selection, 28–30, 183–184
- standards: disciplinary action, 87–89; evaluating workers against, 269, 271–272; functional value of, 78–81; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85
- Standards for Social Work Practice in Child Protection*, 159
- state boards of social work examiners, 17–18
- state codes of conduct, 32
- state conferences, 6
- states, supervisor education requirements for, 346
- stimulating motivation, 129–130
- stress: supervisor coping with, 239–242. See also job-related stress
 - associated with becoming supervisor: change from clinical to managerial tasks, 213–215; general discussion, 216; motives for change, 207–208; overview, 206–207; peer relationship changes, 215–216; preparation for change, 208–210; self-perception and identity, changes in, 210–213
 - ongoing, involved in supervisor role: diversity challenges overview, 222; gender factors, 224–227; general discussion, 217–222, 238–239; hierarchical position, problems related to, 236–238; race and ethnicity factors, 222–223; safety in workplace, 230–236; sexual orientation factors, 227–230
- structure: as associated with masculine characteristics, 224–225; maximizing energy for learning through, 130
- structure scale, Leadership Opinion Questionnaire, 70–71
- structuring individual supervisory conference, 102–104
- successful learning, importance of, 133–134
- success of social work, as source of stress, 172
- summarization, in individual supervisory conference, 116
- “The Superannuated Man,” 215
- supervisee-centered orientation, 111–112
- supervisee games: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200
- supervisee group, influence on supervision, 19
- supervisees. See workers
- supervision: definition of, 8, 11; demography of, 19–20; development of education for social work, 5–8; education for, 344–346; empirical validation of definition, 11–14; evaluation of, 267–269; explaining to workers, 32–33; functions of, 8–9; hierarchical position of supervisors, 9–10; historical development of, 1–5; as indirect service, 10; as interactional process, 10–11; as means to an end, 11; objectives of, 9; positive values of, 346–349; significance of, 19–20. See also specific types of supervision
 - ecology of: agency system, 18; community, 14–16; overview, 14; social work profession, 16–17; state boards of social work examiners, 17–18; supervisor–supervisee dyad, 19; third-party stakeholders, 16; unit peer group, 18–19; worker–client dyad, 19
 - in managed care context: administrative, 335–336; educational, 336; evidence-based practice, 339–340; overview, 333–335; supportive, 336–339

- interminable: attitudes towards, 325–327; balancing accountability and autonomy, 329–330; and debureaucratization, 330–333; overview, 321–324; professional autonomy and licensure, 327–329; and worker autonomy, 324–325
- supervisors: acceptance of supervisee evaluation of, 259; as administrative buffer, 49–51; advocate role of, 48–49; avoidance and abrogation of authority by, 69–72; as change agent and community liaison, 51–53; changes in social work practice, 218; communication function of, 43–48; coping with stress by, 239–242; countering supervisee games, 202–203; dislike of evaluation by, 251–254; dissatisfaction in supervision, sources of, 239; evaluation conference preparation by, 260; evaluation of, 267–269; factors involved in work delegation by, 39–40; as gatekeepers, 29, 37; good, 242–245; hierarchical position of, 9–10; involvement in supervisee games, 197–202; legal responsibility of, 32; observation of workers in group setting, 278; preparation for group supervision, 284–285; problems in implementation of educational supervision, 142–144; recordings of, 311–312; role in group supervision, 287–291; sexism, 344; time spent in different roles, 217; validity of evaluations by, 271–272; value of evaluation to, 250. See also specific types of supervision; supervisory authority and power; teaching
- ongoing stress involved in role: diversity challenges overview, 222; gender factors, 224–227; general discussion, 217–222, 238–239; hierarchical position, problems related to, 236–238; race and ethnicity factors, 222–223; safety in workplace, 230–236; sexual orientation factors, 227–230
- stress associated with becoming: change from clinical to managerial tasks, 213–215; general discussion, 216; motives for change, 207–208; overview, 206–207; peer relationship changes, 215–216; preparation for change, 208–210; self-perception and identity, changes in, 210–213
- supervisor–supervisee relationship: cross-gender, 225–227; influence on supervision, 19; over time, significance of versus cultural factors, 230; overview, 11; positive, importance of to evaluation, 256; sexual harassment in, 234–235; significance of for educational supervision, 140–142; as source of stress, 168–170; supervisee games related to, 197–198
- supervisory authority and power: adaptation to upon becoming supervisor, 213–214; avoidance and abrogation of, 69–72; in group supervision, 283–284; interrelationships among types of, 62–66; legitimization of, 66; nonauthoritarian, 66–68; organizational factors attenuating, 72–74; problems in implementation of, overview, 68–69; rationale for, 57–59; sexual harassment and, 234–235; sources of, 59–62; supervisee countervailing power, 74–78
- supervisory conference groups. See group supervision
- Supervisory Working Alliance Inventory (SWAI), 269
- supportive supervision: as associated with feminine characteristics, 224–225; burnout, 164–166; caveats regarding, 191–194; continued, 325; definitions of, 9, 12–14; good supervisor characteristics, 244; in group supervision, 278–279, 289–290; humor in, 203–205; in managed care context, 336–339; overview, 159–164; value of, 194; worker personality as factor in burnout, 179–182
- additional sources of support for supervisees: clients, 194–195; peer group, 195; social support networks, 195–196; supervisee adaptations, 196
- implementing: overview, 182–183; prevention of stress, 183–184; reducing and ameliorating stress, 184–191
- sources of job-related stress: administrative supervision, 167; clients, 170–173; community attitudes toward social work, 178–179; educational supervision, 167–168; nature and context of tasks, 173–176; organization, 176–178; overview, 166–167; supervisor–supervisee relationship, 168–170
- supervisee games: controlling supervisory situation, 200–202; countering, 202–203; manipulating demand levels, 196–197; overview, 196; redefining supervisory relationship, 197–198; reducing power disparity, 198–200
- support system, group supervision as, 277–278
- surprises in evaluations, avoiding, 257
- SWAI (Supervisory Working Alliance Inventory), 269
- systematic feedback, 41
- tangible rewards, 60
- tardiness, 41–42
- task-centered orientation, 111, 112
- task-related supervisory behavior, 71
- tasks: assignment of, 34–37; changes in when becoming supervisor, 213–215; delegation of, 37–40; nature and context of as source of stress, 173–176; planning, 33–34
- teaching: evaluation focused on, 251; in individual supervisory conference, 105–111; orientations to, 111–112; preparing for individual supervisory conference, 105
- conditions for effective: active involvement, 134–135; energy for learning, 130–132; meaningful presentation of content, 135–137; motivation, 127–130; overview, 127; successful and rewarding learning, 133–134; uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
- team service delivery, 331
- technical knowledge, of supervisor, 206–207
- technical supervision, and job satisfaction, 160
- “Telling It Like It Is” game, 199
- tension, effect on learning, 131. See also job-related stress; stress
- tentativeness, of evaluation, 259
- termination: of educational supervision, 327; of group supervision, 291; of individual supervisory conference, 116–117; of supervisees, 89

- texting, communication through, 45–46
- theoretical bias, in evaluation, 272–273
- theoretical orientation: presenting content within, 135–136; use in teaching, 108
- therapy, differentiating educational supervision from: acceptance of distinction, 150–151; general discussion, 144–145; problems in implementation of, 148–150; purpose and focus, 145–146; role relationships, 146–148
- therapy, in supervisee games, 197–198
- third-party stakeholders, influence on supervision, 16
- time: involved in effective evaluation, 255; role in individual supervisory conference, 103
- time limited supervision, 327
- timeouts, to reduce stress, 184
- top-down work assignment, 35–36
- total quality management (TQM), 332
- training: Charity Organization Society programs, 5–6; evidence-based, 339–340; in-service, versus educational supervision, 90–91; in supervision, 208–210, 344–346. See also educational supervision
- transference, 139, 147, 168–169
- transition to supervisor position. See stress, associated with becoming supervisor
- “Treat Me, Don’t Beat Me” game, 197–198
- trust, role in communication, 47
- turnover, in social work profession, 192–193
- “Two Against the Agency” game, 196–197
- uncertainty: reducing in supportive supervision, 190; as source of stress, 174–175; in supervisor role, 218–219
- undue influence situations, 234–235
- unfamiliar, moving from familiar to, 132
- uniqueness of learner, considering, 137–140
- unit peer group, influence on supervision, 18–19
- unit work plan, 33–34
- universalization, in group supervision, 277
- University of Michigan School of Social Work, 292
- unprofessional behavior, in supportive supervision, 186–187
- unprofessional feelings, normalization of, 186
- unscheduled individual supervisory conferences, 103–104
- upward communication, 44, 48
- usefulness of content, explaining, 127–128
- values, in social work profession, 16–17
- variety in job assignments, importance of, 34
- verbal abuse, as source of stress, 173
- vertical communication, 43–47
- vicarious liability, 54–57
- victim status: of clients, and noncompliance, 83; supervisee claims to, 78
- video recordings: in group supervision, 287; indirect observation through, 307–313; as information source for evaluation, 266; use in supervision, 305
- violence: reactions to in supportive supervision, 184; as source of stress, 172–173; in workplace, as problem for supervision, 231–233
- visitors, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5
- vocabularies of realism, 187–188, 241
- volunteers, Charity Organization Society movement, 2–5
- wages, as source of stress, 177
- welfare reform, 14–15
- well-being, supportive supervision focus on, 162–163
- “What You Don’t Know Won’t Hurt Me” game, 201
- white supervisors, 222–223
- “Who Me? Not Me” game, 201–202
- Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services, 11–12
- withdrawal, emotional, as symptom of burnout, 166
- withholding information from supervisor, 46, 301–304
- “Woe Is Me” game, 200
- women, factors in supervision involving, 224–227
- work: coordinating, 42–43; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating, 40–42; nature and context of as source of stress, 173–176; performance as focus of evaluation, 258; as source of job satisfaction, 129
- work assignment: criteria for, 34–35; overview, 34; problems in, 36–37; procedures for, 35–36
- work clique, as source of support for worker, 195
- work delegation, 37–40
- worker–client dyad, influence on supervision, 19
- workers: adaptations by as source of support for, 196; advocate role of supervisor, 48–49; attitudes towards evaluation, 253–254; attributes involved in work delegation by, 39–40; autonomy of and interminable supervision, 324–325; changes in thinking about when becoming supervisor, 214–215; communication with, 43–48; as content area of educational supervision, 96, 97–100; countervailing power of, 74–78; educational supervision outcomes, 92–93; evaluation conference preparation by, 261–262; evaluation focused on, 250–251; gender factors in ongoing supervision, 225–227; group membership responsibilities, 290–291; importance of educational supervision to, 92; inducting and placing, 30–32; inducting in group supervision, 287; influence on supervision, 19; interrelationships among types of supervisory power, 62–66; monitoring, reviewing, and evaluating, 40–42; monitoring noncompliance, 85–87; noncompliance, understanding, 81–85; observation of supervisor in group setting, 279; parallel process component in educational supervision, 151–155; personality as factor in burnout, 179–182; protection of through rules, 80; reading of written evaluation by, 264–265; recruitment and selection of, 28–30, 183–184; referent power, 61–62; relationship of educational to administrative supervision, 94–95; role of in supervisory relationship, 244; self-evaluation by, 248–249, 262–263; as source of stress for supervisor,

- 220–221; as source of support for supervisors, 240; sources of support for, 194–196; supervisor as administrative buffer, 49–51; supervisor attempts to cope with stress, 241; supervisor evaluation by, 267–269; value of evaluation to, 248–249; vicarious liability, 54–57; work coordination for, 42–43. See also evaluation; individual supervisory conference; job-related stress; learning; observation of performance
- Workforce study, NASW: autonomy of workers, 324–325; best-practice training, 339; interminable supervision, 321–322, 323; job-related stress, 180; professional autonomy and licensure, 328; sexism and social work administration, 344; success of supervision, 348; supervisor characteristics, 206, 207; supervisor preparation, 208–209, 210; supervisor self-appraisal, 267; supportive supervision, 164; workplace violence, 232
- workgroups, new employee induction into, 31
- working alliance, 256
- working relationships, supervision of, 43. See also relationships
- workplace violence, 231–233
- work planning, 33–34
- work setting, as source of stress, 176–178
- workshops, stress management, 185
- work stress. See job-related stress
- written communication, 45–46
- written evaluation, 264–265
- written records, as information source for evaluation, 265–266. See also records
- “Yes-butting” game, 202
- zero-sum rewards, 60

